

nus would here be wanting, with his celestial Fire. But happily it is already inspired. The Fire of Valour already burns and flames in every Part. The important Interests my brave Countrymen are espousing, and the noble Motives they have to act with Steadiness and Intrepidity, have long since roused their Attention, and spirited them up to an uncommon Pitch of martial and heroick Ardor. To re-mind them of these, and thereby augment the generous Heat, and blow it up to a fiercer Flame, is all that needs to be done.

You well know, Gentlemen, and doubtless glory in the Thought, that you are rising up in Defence of a great and excellent People; a People every way worthy of your Friendship and Protection; your Love, your Admiration,
