

A Common Cold

and common carelessness can make a combination strong enough to defy all the healing skill of the physician. Common carelessness lets the cold root and grow. Common carelessness says, between paroxysms of coughing, "It will be all right in a day or two," and the common end is confirmed lung trouble, perhaps consumption. The common-sense treatment of a common cold is a prompt dose of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is the most efficient and reliable cure for colds and coughs, and is constantly prescribed by physicians.

B. HAYNES, M. D., Saranac, N. Y., says:—
"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my practice since 1853, and have always found it reliable for the cure of colds, coughs, and all lung diseases."

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Free advice on any disease from our eminent physician. Address, Medical Department, J. C. AYER CO., Lowell, Mass.

Bonspiel Is Off.

Curlers Decided to Abandon the Detroit Tournament.

A Curling Club Organized at Clinton.

Waterloo Wins a Hockey Match With Berlin—Pugilists Arrested—Baseball and Turf Gossip.

CURLING.

DETROIT BONSPIEL OFF.

Detroit, Jan. 12.—The International Curling Club has been declared off for this year. The rain spoiled what little ice there was left. The officers of the Detroit club called a meeting of the skips of the various cities at the Cadillac, and left it for them to decide whether they would remain over for another day in the hope of colder weather, or postpone play for next year. The former plan would give no hope of cold weather inside of 48 hours, and after that there would not be time enough to finish the competitions before the end of the week.

CLINTON CLUB.

At a meeting held in Clinton, for the purpose of forming a curling club, the following officers were elected: John Ramsford, president; Dr. Shaw, vice-president; W. Jackson, secretary. The building committee have got their work well in hand, and a fine commodious rink is rapidly nearing completion. Everything is expected to be in order this week, and the London curling club are to play in the opening matches in the new rink. The Clintonians' success in lawn bowling is an augury that they will not be behind when they take up curling.

THE TURF.

A London correspondent writes: There never were so many millionaires on the English turf as at present. The owners of them pay their way, too; but it requires good horses to do this. Among our recent recruits are many from over the seas. Mr. Cassel, for instance, has been encouraged by the grand coup of some of his fellow-colonials to enter prize on a large scale. Mr. Cassel's big triumph at Ascot with Cheyd and Mr. Lorillard's second in the Cesarewitch may have inspired him to start the new mile made on a chain tandem by Church and McCurdy, who hold the championship of Pennsylvania, is 55 seconds.

CANADIAN RACING CIRCUIT.

Detroit, Jan. 12.—The Palmer-Hendrie racing syndicate met on Tuesday. There will be no conflict of dates, either with other running races or the trotting meetings, and the probable dates at Highland Park will be June 9 to 25. Highland Park will follow the meetings at Toronto and Hamilton.

It is the intention to form a circuit that will suit Michigan and Canadian towns by a series of meetings, expected to attract only the best class of horses. Fifteen stakes, valued at $25,000, will be offered at the spring meetings to be held at Detroit, Fort Erie and Windsor. At Highland Park the Detroit Derby, valued at $25,000, will be renewed. A Derby of the same value will be run at Fort Erie on the opening day.

PEOPLE WHO HAVE USED THEM SAY

Lax Liver Pills

are a pleasant and natural remedy, clearing away all effete and poisonous matter from the system, without any griping or weakening effects.

MARGARET BARNES, 5 Grandville Street, Halifax, N. S., says: "I have used Lax Liver Pills for Constipation and Sick Headache, and found them excellent."

ing day. The purses and over-night events at each track will range from $750 to $500.

Arrangements for leasing the track at Montreal are about completed. John J. Carter will act as presiding judge at all the tracks. Manager Farmer said that Frank Nelson, of Toronto, would be asked to act as associate judge at Fort Erie.

Two meetings of fifteen days each will be given on each track. Trotting meetings will also be given at Highland Park and Windsor, the latter under the auspices of the Windsor Driving Association.

TIPS.

Burns, the Canadian jockey, had two more winning mounts at New Orleans Tuesday; also a second.

The combined winnings of Mr. Lord and his racing confederate, Lord William Beresford, on the English turf this season, amount to $1,200, of which sum The Sailor Prince, playing at Ranocas, contributed $42,085.

BASEBALL.

WILKESBARRE NOT SOLD.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Jan. 12.—President Powers of the Eastern League was not successful yesterday in his mission to buy the Wilkesbarre club, and he left for Rochester. It is said he is just as well pleased, as he has always been friendly to Wilkesbarre. Mr. Powers declined to say whether he wanted the Wilkesbarre franchise for Rochester or Newark. The baseball situation here may be summed up as follows: Unless Wilkesbarre is paid a fancy price she will not surrender her franchise in the Eastern League, but will to work at once and place a strong team in the field.

"DOC" SIPP'S OPINION.

Hamilton Herald: Arthur Sippl, familiarly known to devotees of the diamond as "Doc" Sippl, and who has for some years occupied a position of prominence in the London baseball club, has retired from the game and devoted himself to mercantile pursuits. Mr. Sippl was in Hamilton last night as the traveling agent of a binder (wine concern of Toronto, and assured the Herald that he would play ball never again. Mr. Sippl is not any too sanguine concerning the outcome of the new International League, though he hopes for its success. He professes to know that the London management has not signed any players for the coming season, and doesn't place much faith in the fact that the several clubs in the new league have sent in their reservation lists. "Doc" is firmly of the opinion that Guelph will not be able to join the league for financial reasons, but thinks that with Grand Rapids in the place of the Royal City, the league would be more prosperous.

ATHLETICS.

PUGILISTS ARRESTED.

Buffalo, Jan. 12.—Leslie Pearce, of Philadelphia, and Kid McPartland, who have boxed twenty rounds before the Olympic Athletic Club last night. Early in the day, however, the boxers were arrested on the instance of the Methodist Ministers' Association, and put under bonds not to violate the provisions of the Horton law, under which boxing exhibitions are held in this state. In the evening Pearce refused to go into the ring, although the club of course were anxious to pull off the bout, and offered him a substantial guarantee that he would not be molested.

HOCKEY.

BERLIN VS. WATERLOO.

Waterloo, Ont., Jan. 12.—The first scheduled game of hockey in the junior series was played here last night—Berlin vs. Waterloo. At the end of half time the score stood 2 to 1 in favor of Waterloo. At the end of the time the score was 4 to 1 in favor of Waterloo.

A CHAINLESS TANDEM.

Philadelphia, Jan. 12.—The first chainless tandem bicycle ever built was given a private trial in this city on Monday, and proved a really wonderful piece of cycling mechanism. The machine was an old road tandem, weighing about 100 lbs., and had been put into shape for the cycle show. It was fitted with the Gentry-Jake tandem, which has been used by Bob McCurdy were selected to ride the machine. They made the quarter in 27 seconds, and the half in 56 seconds. The best half mile made on a chain tandem by Church and McCurdy, who hold the championship of Pennsylvania, is 55 seconds.

BILLIARDS.

JUST FOR FUN.

Jake Schaefer and Frank Ives played billiards at Chicago the other day just for fun. The first game was 100 points at 18-inch ball game, the noted experts playing on even terms. Schaefer ran the game out in the second inning, after failing to count from the spot stroke. He won by a narrow margin. Jake missed the opening shot and left the balls well for his opponent. Ives made 29 and fell down on a hand vision from the second game was under similar conditions, and this time Ives ran 100 points in five innings, with an average of 20. Schaefer making only 27. Then the experts played three games of three-cushion carroms, Ives winning two of them, the scores being 10 to 4, 9 to 10, 10 to 6.

SOUVENIR RANGES

Give Users Perfect Satisfaction.

LONDON, April 20th, 1894. Messrs. Wyatt & Sons: Gentlemen—Money could not purchase the "Souvenir" Range I bought from you unless I could get another. I give genuine satisfaction, and can not be excused as a baker. I am much pleased with my purchase.

J. D. ROBERTSON.

361 Central Avenue.

20th eod

In early ages any device for measuring time was known as a horologium. As late as the reign of James I. of England clocks were called horologues.

THERE is not a more dangerous class of disorders than those which affect the breathing organs. Nullify this danger with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil—a pulmonary of acknowledged efficacy. It cures soreness and lameness when applied externally, as well as swollen neck and crick in the back; and, as an inward specific, possesses most substantial claim to public confidence.

The London County Council has undertaken to reform or abate the noises in the streets so far as the shouting of newspaper boys is concerned.

MUNYON'S COUGH CURE.

MUNYON'S COUGH CURE stops a cough, allays irritation and soreness of the chest and acts marvelously as a soothing and healing balm for diseased lungs. It positively cures bronchial cough, with rattling in the windpipe and tightness across the chest, rattling cough with secretions of mucus, hoarseness, loss of voice, soreness of the chest, difficulty in breathing, coughs from nasal catarrh, hacking cough of old people, short, dry with quick breathing, languor, debility and night sweats, in fact, every form of cough and all pulmonary diseases, where the lungs are not too far consumed by the disease or covered by tubercles. Price 25c.

A separate cure for each disease. At all druggists, mostly 25c a vial.

Personal letters to Prof. Munyon, 11 and 13 Albert street, Toronto, answered, with free medical advice for any disease.

CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.

Beware of imitators who are copying our advertisements, appropriating our methods, and following the plan adopted by us without our introduction. Our remedies to the people of Ontario year ago. You can easily distinguish between the original and the imitation. Prof. Munyon, who has been a member of the school of Homeopathy, does not desire that the public should be imposed upon.

London Normal School

Another Vote for Erecting the New Institution.

Boys' Reformatory Will Be Moved From Penetang to Oxford.

The Electric Light Companies' Bill Laid Over.

Toronto, Jan. 12.—In the piggy investigations, Inspector Nixon said the cost was about $800. The work had been charged to Central Prison construction, and the details could be got by examining the books.

At the meeting of the municipal committee yesterday, Mr. Auld's bill to compel all municipalities intending to establish a lighting plant to buy out or compensate existing electric light companies had several strong advocates. By an act passed last session such a law is in force with regard to municipalities of less than 5,000 inhabitants. Lawyers representing the electric light companies of the province in general, appeared before the committee to advocate the bill, on the ground that municipalities of whatever size had no right to encourage investigation to start enterprises and then turn around and destroy their property. In opposition to the bill the ground was taken that at present electric light companies were compelled to give the public just terms by the fear that municipalities would step in and compel them to purchase the same. It became law the companies would be a position to raise their rates and adopt every possible measure to inflate their stock. There would be no reason to do so in order to obtain a high valuation for their property when the municipality proposed to purchase the electric franchise. Finally the bill was withdrawn.

SUPPLEMENTARY ESTIMATES.

The supplementary estimates were presented to the house this afternoon. The total amount required is $24,854,333. The items, by departments, are as follows: Civil government, $1,560; administration, $1,880; education, $500; public institutions, $250; agriculture, $750; hospitals and charities, $2,477; repairs and maintenance, $2,070; public buildings, $56,232; public works, $22,000; colonization roads, $15,059; lands, $12,700; refunds, $3,226; miscellaneous, $89,197; consolidation of statutes, $14,000.

The expenses in the department of agriculture refer to the administration of the San Jose scale act.

In the public buildings list there is $25,000 for a normal school in London, $75,000 for the site for a boys' reformatory in the county of Oxford, the present reformatory to be used as an asylum for chronic and harmless insane, and $1,000 for alterations in the London asylum.

A further grant of $5,000 is made for the fire sufferers in Prescott and Russell.

IN THE HOUSE.

The government bill to provide that all lunatic cut of public lands made in future be manufactured in Canada was read a second time.

Hon. Mr. Gibson, in moving the measure, said that it did not go far enough. The only way it could go further would be to make the measure applicable at once, which would be a breach of contract that might lead to expensive legal proceedings. It was not true, as charged by some, that the lumbermen were over-cutting this season to all the lumbermen for an estimate of the cut. The replies had been such that there would be no excessive cut. But it might be said that their information would be accurate. This was not the case, for the cut was regulated by the outtake in the woods during the first of the season. "It may occasion surprise when I say that not so much will be taken out in 1895 as was taken out in 1894," said Mr. Gibson. In 1895 the export was 279,837,000 feet; in 1894 the export was 211,745,000; in 1893 the export was 228,048,000. Mr. Gibson further said that it had been charged that the bill was drawn up in such a way that it might be disallowed by the Dominion Government. Then the Provincial Government would get the credit of the policy enacted, and yet nothing would come of it. Mr. Gibson said that the Dominion Government could not take such a course, but if they did the Ontario Government would have to put up with the private regulations, which would have the same effect.

Mr. Martin, in reply, asserted that the Americans were intending to rust out the logs in anticipation of the manufacturing conditions.

Mr. Haycock (Patron leader) deprecated any retaliatory policy for Canada, and claimed that Americans were doing nothing to improve the duty on saved lumber, but the same thing as this country does with its duty on manufactured cotton. He advocated the increase of stumpage duty by $2, and giving a bonus of $2 per thousand when manufactured in Canada to the shipper and last plan of dealing with this difficult public question.

Mr. Stratton, Mr. Ewen, Mr. St. John, Mr. German and Premier Hardy continued the debate. The latter vigorously upheld the position of the government in compelling the manufacture of logs in this country. The house adjourned at 12:05 this morning.

Festivities at Montreal.

Interesting Speeches by Leaders Among Men.

Important Declarations by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Adolphe Chapleau and Others.

Montreal, Jan. 12.—The complimentary dinner extended to Mayor Wilson-Smith whose term of office is about to expire, by the citizens of Montreal at the Windsor last night, was a flattering acknowledgment of his services as chief magistrate of the city. There were over 300 present, and it was, beyond doubt, the most distinguished gathering which ever did honor to a mayor in Montreal. The chair was occupied by Mr. John McKernan, president of the board of trade, who had on his right his Excellency the Governor-General, Mayor Wilson-Smith, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Sir Adolphe Chapleau, Hon. C. E. Bouchette, Sir Alexander Lacoste, Hon. J. Israel Tarte, Senator Villeneuve, Hon. J. E. C. Cartier, and on his left Sir Adolphe Chapleau, Hon. C. E. Bouchette, Rev. Canon Macleod, Sir M. Tait, Judge Wurtelle, Judge Davidson, Sir William Hingston, Senator J. E. Thibault, Messrs. E. S. Coulson, W. W. Ogilvie, Wolfertson Thomas, and Mr. Kleckowski, the French hotelier. When the ladies, including Lady Laurier and the Misses Wilson-Smith, entered the hall, the French hotelier, Lord Aberdeen made a general reply to the toast of "The Governor-General."

The health of the mayor having been given, Archbishop Bruchesi supported the toast. He wished to show by his presence that church and state were united in praising Mr. Smith for the good work he had done during his term of office. Referring to a remark of Sir Adolphe Chapleau, he said that his mission was a mission of peace. Lately he was in Toronto, and if anyone wanted to know what he was doing there, he would say that he was on a mission of peace.

Archdeacon Evans, representing Bishop Bond, added his testimony to the general esteem in which the mayor is held. Rev. Canon Elliott also supported the toast, and the mayor made an effective reply.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

The next toast, "The Dominion of Canada," was proposed by Mr. George Hargue, manager of the Merchants' Bank.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was received with great applause, the entire audience rising and cheering. As to the mayor, Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend, his dear friend, the lieutenant-governor of Quebec, he felt that if Sir Adolphe Chapleau died it would be like Phoenix to rise from his ashes. He believed that a man of Sir Adolphe's literary character liked the quiet of Spencerwood, but he also believed that Sir Wilfrid said, amid great laughter, that if Mr. Wilson-Smith continued to keep on the right side he would have his reward. As to his old friend,