$6,000 DAMAGES FOR PERSONAL INJURIES ASKED FROM RAILWAY

London Women Enter Suits Against Street Car Company

THREE CASES SET DOWN

Supreme Court Non-Jury List for Nov. 5, Has Been Started.

Three cases, all actions to recover damages for alleged injuries, have been set down for hearing at the non-jury sittings of the supreme court to open at the court house on Monday, November 5.

Mrs. Louise Henstridge, 66½ Wharncliffe road, and her daughter Lena are suing the London Street Railway Company, the mother for $4,000, and the daughter for $2,000.

The plaintiffs' claims are that on June 6 while attempting to board a street car at the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets, they were thrown to the pavement and injured because the car was started, they claim too soon. Negligence on the part of the street railway company's employees is claimed.

The company in its statement of defence claims that the plaintiffs did not exercise sufficient caution, and as a consequence their injuries were the result of their own negligence.

The third case is that of Samuel Morningstar, on behalf of Stanley Morningstar, the latter under 21 years of age, against W. J. Mitchell, a resident of St. Marys.

The plaintiff claims that Stanley Morningstar, a driver for the Keystone Bedding Company, while proceeding with a horse and wagon, was struck by a motor car, driven by Mitchell, on September 13 last. The plaintiff claims Mitchell tried to drive between his wagon and another car coming in an opposite direction to which Morningstar was going. As a result of the accident, it is claimed, Morningstar sustained a fractured skull and a broken collarbone.

The statement of Mitchell in his defence is that Morningstar was driving on the wrong side of the street, that the accident was unavoidable, and that Morningstar did not suffer the injuries claimed.

The action is for unstated damages. "SOCIAL BUTTERFLY" HUSBAND'S CHARGE, BUT TRUCE ARRANGED

Temporary Peace Patched Up By Magistrate.

A case in which Pearl, the wife of John McKinnon, charges her husband with non-support, was adjourned for two weeks, when called in police court today in order to permit of a reconciliation between the affected parties, if such is possible.

The husband said the wife longed to be a social butterfly, and went to too many dances and parties to suit him. Mrs. McKinnon claimed, on the other hand, that her husband had threatened to blow out her brains.

The magistrate suggested that the estranged couple endeavor to reach a better understanding, and if possible avoid any further police court proceedings. They both promised to try, and the result of their efforts will be made known to the magistrate two weeks from today.

Transfer Titles of Farms To Sons To Evade Service

Many Farmers Adopting This Means to Keep Boys Home.

A London lawyer reports that a great many farmers are having partial ownership in their farms transferred to their sons. This lawyer has been busy for some days going over papers and making the necessary arrangements.

Those who are having the transfers made believe that the transferring of an interest will have an influence on the decision of tribunals in regard to the military service of their sons.

15 PUNISHES REQUIRED TO RISE FIGHTING IRE DEFENDANT'S STORY

Long Suffering, However, Had Battle Royal Sequel.

A common family wash tub was the cause of a battle royal between Mary A. Trincomi, 618 Bathurst street, and her neighbor, Matilda Blackwell, who appeared in police court today, the former being the defendant, the latter the plaintiff.

Mrs. Blackwell testified that Mrs. Trincomi accused her of stealing her tub, and when she denied the charge, that Mrs. Trincomi had struck her over the head three times with a broom, and then as a parting jolt Mrs. Trincomi got her (Mrs. Blackwell's) head under her arm, and taking good aim, poked her in the eye. All the exhibits were noted.

"Yes, I hit her," said Mary. "but I waited until she hit me 15 times, and when I thought she was never going to stop I took a hand at the game myself." "So you let her hit you 15 times before you got in fighting mood?" asked the magistrate.

The defendant nodded. The magistrate suggested that the women find something more important than a wash tub to fight over.

DESERTER WHO TRIED TO ESCAPE SERVICE IN U. S., SENTENCED

Sent Down for Year by the Magistrate.

COWARDICE ARRAIGNED

Conduct Pilloried in Court When Ex-A. M. C. Man Comes Up.

After trying to evade military service in Canada by deserting from the C.A.M.C., and then endeavoring to evade again duty when drafted into the army of the United States, to which country he had fled, Peter Peters, a resident of Wallaceton, today in police court, and finished with a one-year sentence in jail.

Peter enlisted with the C.A.M.C. in December, 1916, but soon grew tired of life in the army. He secured a pass to go home on a three-day visit. He instead went on a prolonged visit to Detroit, in which city he secured a job. When the United States draft was put into effect, Peter was corralled into the net. As he had fled to the States to escape military duty here, he found himself "on the horns of a dilemma" when he was ordered to report for duty under the Stars and Stripes. He refused to do so, and his answers to the military officers there were of such an evasive character that he was taken into custody pending inquiry into his record. He then admitted that he had deserted from the Canadian army, and was handed over to the military authorities at Windsor a few days ago.

In police court today he pleaded guilty to desertion, but gave no satisfactory reason for his conduct. The magistrate said he was ordered to desert.

"Your case is the most flagrant instance of cowardice," that has been brought to my notice," said the magistrate in passing sentence. "You have deserted in Canada, and were caught in the draft in the United States, and seeing no way out, you then admitted the facts."

"What would happen to our military system if every man was to act as you have acted?" asked the magistrate.

The sentence imposed makes it possible for the military authorities, if they so desire, to make application for Peter's release, but "on condition" he promise to go overseas with the first draft upon being released.

FUEL REGULATIONS ISSUED, DEALERS DISSENT, SHARP DEALERS, GAS CO. ADVISE

To Be Effective Should Go Into Force Now, Declares Big Producers' Representative, Who Believes New Order Will Complicate Already Serious Local Situation.

Concerning the new regulations of the fuel control act announced today, W. A. Martin of the D. L. & W. Coal Company said: "Such regulations should have been in force three months ago, away back in June or July in order to have the desired effect on the coal situation. It is rather late in the order, now that 60 or 65 per cent. of London's fuel supply for the winter has been delivered to consumers."

"Again, since the regulations are just about three months late, they should go into force at once or they will complicate the situation rather than simplify it. If a period of time is allowed until the 21st of November before the regulations become law the natural thing to expect is that the coal dealers will be swamped with orders in the meantime. This will mean that they will be obliged to go to the smaller American jobbers in order to meet the demands on them and probably an advance in the price of coal."

"The American fuel controller in regulations made several months ago allowed the smaller producers to charge higher prices than the big companies, up to $1.55 a ton in price, owing to the greater cost of production and handling because of the lack of facilities which the larger companies enjoy."

"In the competitive coal business, it is a good deal of a temptation for a dealer to fill a large order when the bait is laid out to him by his business another year." If the regulations announced today had been in force three months ago they wouldn't have been so many instances in London this year similar to one which has come under my notice. A man who 22½ uses a large quantity of coal, between 70 and 80 tons in all, made a contract with his dealer last April to supply him with coal at $1 a ton. He had to enough to tide him over till Christmas, but recently he went to his dealer and demanded the rest. The dealer stated he couldn't give it at the time, owing to the fact that other customers were supplied at all. The man, who can afford to pay, went straight to another dealer and got 20 tons at $1.55 more than he would have been obliged to pay the first dealer. It was a temptation to the second dealer to supply the 20 tons with future business held out as bait. There have been many instances where people have gone first to one dealer and then another, getting five tons here, three there, and two here, to make up their winter's supply. Limited Profits Mean Increase.

No far as 50 cents a ton profit for retail dealers over and above expenses is concerned, I am sure the majority of dealers in Canada will be well pleased with 50 cents a ton. It may mean even a slight advance in the price of coal, but there are five towns in the province where dealers have been getting a net profit of 50 cents and London isn't one of the five.

"The clause concerning brokers and wholesalers practically does not affect Ontario at all. It applies to the bituminous operators in Eastern and Western Canada and their sale agencies. Since practically all the anthracite and soft coal used in Ontario comes from the States, only a little of the Canadian being used in Eastern Ontario, this doesn't apply here. The big American coal companies have their wholesale offices here, and the brokers who operate in Canada are in charge of the sale of American coal to the firms representing the smaller operators, who are authorized to get the highest prices."

FORESTRY CHANGE AS SOON AS PRESENT DRAFT LEAVES CITY

Unofficial Statements Indicate Speedy Transfer.

Although nothing official has been given out concerning the case, it is stated unofficially that soon as the present members of the Forestry and Game Commission leave the city, a new service, their branch of the service will be dispensed with, and the city forestry and game department will be carried on by the engineers.

It is not intended that no further men, qualified for forestry and construction work, will be added to the staff, but instead of joining the forestry and construction units, will be the near future be joining the engineers.

ITALIAN GOVERNMENT DEFEATED IN HOUSE ON CONFIDENCE VOTE

Crisis Is Result of the Food Situation Throughout Country.

Rome, Thursday, Oct. 25.—The Government was defeated in the Chamber of Deputies today when a vote of confidence failed.

The Italian Parliament reopened session less than two weeks ago. A dispatch from Turin on October 17 said that the position of the Government was endangered because of the serious riot in Turin during the latter part of August, and because of the general food crisis throughout Italy. The food controller, Giuseppe Canepa, resigned owing to the food situation. The dispatch said that the Government would be called upon by Parliament to justify its action.

The Rome correspondent of the Petit Parisien reported Thursday that political circles in Italy were expecting the Government to be called upon to form a national ministry.

When the Salandra ministry resigned in June, 1916, it was succeeded by the present Bonelli cabinet, which was reconstituted June 16, 1917.

TORONTO MUCH BETTER

Proportion of Reports for Service There Five to London's One.

Returns under the military service act show that registration of men in Toronto district who are waiting exemption is much better proportionately than in London. Up until yesterday the total number of returns was 16,367. Of these 1,967 were reports for service. This is an average of more than one man in every ten reporting for service.

For the same time in London, there had been 8,048 returns, only 161 of these being reports for service, or an average of but one man waiting exemption to every 50 claiming it.

OLDTIME CHARGE IN POLICE COURT

After Absence of Years, Peanut Vendors Fined Again.

Gus Hastel, 142 Queen's avenue, a peanut vendor, vended his wares in the restricted district for his business, and as a consequence parted with a fine of $2 and costs. Gus reluctantly paid the fine, and was induced to do so only after unbending himself of an oration that would have done credit to Demosthenes of Greece. Gus talked for a time as if he was practicing with "tebbles in his mouth," but when the magistrate said $2 and costs, he broke forth with his real oratorical artillery.

"Chief Williams and Inspector Birrell 'spiked Hastel's guns' by allying him gently on a spectator's bench. As Gus reluctantly paid the fine, he muttered it took the profits of the sales of a good many sacks of peanuts."
