The speaker asked the ladies present if they would be satisfied with protection for themselves and children "on the endless chain plan, that has to get men and women to come in to pay the money you owe." (Applause).

"The I.O.F. says every man has a right to get what he pays for, but it is his duty to pay for what he gets." he continued. "No man nor woman has a right to expect that when it comes to providing for the widow and orphan that one should take a chance on doing business on the endless chain plan."

Protection at Proper Cost.

When one purchased a hat or pair of shoes, he expected to pay what they were worth, but when it came to providing for the family, there was a disposition to go looking around for the bargain counter. It was well to get protection at the least cost, but it should be paid for what it cost, no more and no less. The veterans who had built up the order would feel better satisfied to be paying a fair share of what the newer members were getting. It was much more satisfactory to have an equitable arrangement so that no member could say to another: "I am paying part of your insurance." make it as easy as possible to do right and as hard as possible to do wrong.
