SANITARY CONDITIONS ARE ESSENTIAL TO HEALTHY HOMES

(Conservation)
The art of laying-out either the nucleus of a new city or the extension of an existing one, to the best advantage of its population, as regards economy, beauty and health, both now, and in time to come, is called "town-planning." If the twentieth century is to be marked by Canada's expansion, and no one doubts the statement, it is in the highest degree essential that we should be wise and see to it that none of the evils incident to the development of the great industrial centres of other countries, particularly in the way of insufficient, inadequate and improper housing accommodation, scar the fair name of Canada.

Let it be said of Canadians that we have been wise, and by the early adoption of preventive measures, have endeavored to obviate errors in town-planning and housing. These will no longer be possible if adequate powers be given to health authorities to condemn, and, if need be, destroy the house which is not a home. Along these lines the commission of Conservation is working, in the hope that our provincial governments will, at an early date, adopt the necessary legislation, and what is more essential to the successful carrying out of the work, will establish provincial boards or commissions to direct and supervise the work, which is of a peculiarly technical character. To attain this end, the assistance of the public is necessary, for it cannot be too clearly understood that sanitary reform in this direction waits on public opinion. Without this impulse from the people, no substantial housing reform is possible.

Perhaps to secure this public opinion the moral effects of sanitary reform may be indicated in the words of two well-known English reformers, one a philanthropist, and the other a sanitarian, Lord Shaftesbury and Sir J. Simon. The former said: "Nine-tenths of our poverty, misery and crime are produced by habits of intoxication, and I trace these demoralizing conditions of the great mass of the population of this metropolis and of the large towns of the country." While the father of sanitary science in England wrote most tersely—"Where overcrowding exists, in a sanitary sense, almost always it exists even more perniciously in certain moral senses. To children who are born under its curse, it must often be a very baptism of infancy." If, therefore, we cannot favor this sanitary problem for sanitary reasons, surely the appeal for support to effort now being made to secure improved and healthier homes, must strike a sympathetic cord in the hearts of mothers and fathers—for, to sum up the opinion of these two philanthropists, overcrowding is damnation of both body and soul.

Bad Blood

is the direct and inevitable result of irregular or constipated bowels and clogged-up kidneys and skin. The undigested food and other waste matter which is allowed to accumulate poisons the blood and the whole system. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills act directly on the bowels, regulating them—on the kidneys, giving them ease and strength to properly filter the blood—and on the skin, opening up the pores.
