Is The Right Food For Your Baby The strongest argument for your using NEAVE'S FOOD for your baby, is that it is the only food which has proved its value for the youngest and most delicate infant.

La MARQUISE de FONTENOY

The Story of the Chetwynds Recalled by Bankruptcy Proceedings—Left Handed People Form Association (Copyright, 1912, by the Brewster Com. Party.)

Florence Chetwynd, (widow of the Hon. Richard Chetwynd, who would have succeeded to his father's viscountcy but for his suicide several years ago), is again in trouble. This time she has come into conflict with the London Bankruptcy Court, and as she has failed to pay any attention to the directions of that tribunal, an order has been issued for her arrest.

Her bankruptcy is due to her almost insane extravagance. She is the sister of the late Sir Herbert Naylor-Leland, and co-heir of the colossal fortune of old Tom Naylor-Leland, who founded the Leyland line of steamers. Sir Herbert married an extremely pretty American woman, Jessie Chamberlain of Cleveland, Ohio, who used to be so great a favorite with King Edward and Queen Alexandra, for the reason, as they said, that she was about the only American woman they knew who did not depreciate their American, and, above all, her countrywomen.

Sir Herbert died very suddenly a few years ago while a member of parliament and an officer of the Royal Horse Guards. Her eldest son attained his majority last December. She is only forty-three years of age, and has retained to a marvellous degree her great beauty, her elasticity and gracefulness of figure and her charm. Indeed, she might easily pass for a woman of thirty.

But to return to Florence Chetwynd. Her marriage was not a happy one. Sir Richard had frequently been bankrupt, was entirely dependent upon her, and upon his father-in-law for money, and was ultimately divorced by his wife, the court giving the custody of their two daughters to her. But Mrs. Chetwynd was extremely extravagant, not only in money matters, but also in her conduct; so much so, that her relatives caused her to be committed to an asylum, whence, however, she secured her release, through appeal to higher courts.

During the few months that she spent there her mother, Mrs. Thomas Naylor-Leland, widow of the millionaire shop-owner of the Leyland line of steamers, obtained an order from the courts, intrusting her with the custody of her grand-daughter. But her daughter was no more free than she instituted proceedings against her mother, bringing all sorts of outlandish evidence to show that latter was not a fit person to be intrusted with the education of young girls, being as she alleged half crazy, and given up to spiritualistic fads and fancies. So extraordinary was the evidence presented by the daughter against the mother, and by the mother against the daughter, that the courts finally decided that neither of the two women was fit to be guardian of the young girls, and accordingly assigned them to the care of an elderly member of the Leland family, Christopher John Leland of Haggerston Castle, Northumberland.

Before they had been there for more than a couple of years, their mother made an attempt to abduct them, and, having chartered a yacht, awaited them at Beal, a point on the Northumberland coast, to which they were to be brought by those whom she had employed to assist her in the affair. It is only just to mention that the young girls, who are devoted to their mother and were very unhappy at gloomy old Haggerston Castle, remember many a thing and are devoted to their mother and were very unhappy at gloomy old Haggerston Castle, remember many a thing and are devoted to their mother and were very unhappy at gloomy old Haggerston Castle.

For several years afterwards, she lived in Paris with a warrant out for her arrest in the event of her return to England, on a charge of contempt of court. This warrant she subsequently succeeded in having withdrawn. Less fortunate, however, were those whom she had employed to assist her in contriving the escape of her daughters from Haggerston Castle, for they had rendered themselves guilty of abduction, which is a felony, and were condemned to penal servitude. Since then, she has been living on an allowance made to her by the trustees of the Naylor-Leland estate, constantly in financial trouble, and compelled to have frequent recourse to her relatives.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

Did you ever happen to notice what different things different people will remember about the same event? Truly it is a most interesting study in the psychology of memory to try this experiment.

The other night, four of us who had not met for some years—I refuse to say just how many—came together. Naturally we fell to reminiscing. At that last meeting we had all gone off on a canoe trip together, so the conversation ran something like this: "Do you remember those crackerjack sandwiches with some kind of fancy filling in them, that Gretchen made?" questioned one of the men folks of the party. None of the rest of us did. "But I remember some lemon and orange meringue that she made. And didn't it taste good after that hot walk?" reminisced another materialistic male. He also was alone in his reminiscence.

"My, wasn't it hot," mused Gretchen. "I wore that most shocking rag of a dress because it was the coolest thing I owned, and I didn't have the decency to be ashamed of it." "I remember that dress," corroborated another member of the party. "It was light blue and it had white around the neck, and you looked as cool as a cucumber and a good prettier." (I don't suppose I need state the gender of the member from which this corroborated came.) "It had white linen collar and cuffs buttoned in blue. You made them at my house." "Oh, I remember it, too," I suddenly recollected. "It had white linen collar and cuffs buttoned in blue. You made them at my house." "And after lunch we read a story aloud, and the boys said it was silly and sentimental, but it really was beautiful,"—this from Gretchen. None of the rest of us recalled the story at all.

Then I recollected a game of cards which no one would corroborate, and Gretchen told about a pathetic little woman on the train who had lost her ticket; one of the men prated about a wonderful flock of ducks which kept flying near us all day; and of which he could undoubtedly have brought down a dozen at a shot if he had had his gun; the other recalled a short cut through the woods which we took on the way home. Not more than two of us remembered any of these things; most of them, all but one of us had entirely forgotten.

But enough. I didn't mean to bore you with a full account of our canoe trip. I merely wanted to illustrate how strangely memory works. Just as two people will pass through life remembering totally different things, so two people who witness the same event will remember it in different ways. I think you will be interested to find what different things each one will remember.

ON ROYAL TOUR OF CANADA

Miss Pelly, lady-in-waiting to Duchess of Cornwall, is with the royal party touring the Dominion.

ed by the extraordinary facility displayed by Sir Edwin Landseer, during one of his visits to Montreal, in sketching as well with his left hand as with his right. All Queen Victoria's children, and their children in turn, are thus trained. Queen Maud of Norway is ambidextrous, and so is the Czarina, who can use her left arm and hand with just as much facility as her right. She can write, draw, paint, play tennis, embroider, and fence, with her left arm and hand. When it is borne in mind that in the course of many of the throngs of Europe will be heard the descendants of Queen Victoria, it will be seen that left-handedness and ambidexterity will enjoy a honorable and exalted place in the estimation of people in general and may even become a cult in the future.

GIRLS ON STRIKE FOR DANCE PRIVILEGE Refused to Marry Unless Rabbi Gave Way, and They Won

Vienna, May 25.—An unusual form of strike is reported from Sochaczow, a village in Russian Poland. The population is almost exclusively Jewish, and a new rabbi, who found his congregation too frigidly inclined, forbade the holding of dances in the place altogether. A deputation of young women waited on him and demanded that this prohibition be withdrawn, but the rabbi remained unyielding. All the marriageable girls of the place thereupon held a meeting and resolved unanimously not to wed until dancing was allowed again. For two months they refused to marry, and the rabbi gave way.

EVERY PLACE ON THE WIDE PRAIRIES

Tells of Cures Made by Dodd's Kidney Pills

Thos. Griffin of Peace River Landings Tells How he Got Rid of His Rheumatism—Honesty Earned Popularity Cold Springs, Peace River Landings, Alberta, May 24.—(Special)—Just why Dodd's Kidney Pills retain their wonderful popularity is easily shown by a trip across the prairies. Every town, village and post-office has at least one man or woman who is ready to tell of pains relieved and health restored by the great Canadian Kidney Remedy. Let Thos. Griffin of this place add his statement to the hosts already published. "When I came to this part of the country," says Mr. Griffin, "I was troubled with a bad back and Rheumatism in my shoulders and hips. I sent for six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and they gave me relief at once. I also recommended them to my eldest son who was confined to his bed from Rheumatism. "Now I know that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best medicine for Rheumatism and the Kidneys. I recommend them to every person I hear complaining of not feeling well." Dodd's Kidney Pills made their popularity by curing sick Kidneys. They keep their popularity by keeping on curing sick Kidneys.

Daily Hints For the Cook

CHEESE CUSTARD.

For three persons two ounces of grated parmesan cheese; the whites of three eggs beaten to a stiff froth, a little pepper, salt and cayenne, a little milk or cream to mix; bake for quarter of an hour.

BRISISH STEW WITH TOMATOES

One pound of beef, one beef knuckle, cracked, two onions, one turnip, two carrots, two potatoes, two tomatoes or one third can, one-half cup of flour. Cut the meat in small pieces, putting aside the fat, and put meat and bones in a kettle, cover with cold water and put on the fire. Put the fat in a spider and fry a sliced onion in it. If there was not enough fat for the purpose use some beef dripping or pork fat. Stir in a half cup of flour and when browned turn all into the kettle. Simmer from two to three hours, adding boiling water occasionally to keep a good amount.

About an hour before serving, add the turnip and carrots cut in dice, and about half an hour later the potatoes quartered, the tomatoes, and pepper and salt. Remove the bones before adding the vegetables. When done, if the gravy is not as thick as desired, skiln out the meat and vegetables and thicken it, then serve separately, or pour over the stew as desired.

If you wish dumplings, make some from your favorite recipe and drop quickly in to the boiling stew when nearly done, cover closely, and cook 10 to 15 minutes.

PUT HUSBAND IN AN ASYLUM IN ORDER TO GET A DIVORCE

Geneva, May 25.—In Switzerland, one of the grounds for divorce is, when either husband and wife has been declared to be insane. Advantage was recently taken of this fact by a woman who wished to be free from her nuptial bonds. She caused her husband to be seized and taken to an asylum, a local doctor signing a certificate to the effect that the man was insane.

When the man arrived at the asylum he was examined by the cantonal expert and another doctor, who found him to be perfectly sane, and sent him home again. The husband is now suing the doctor who gave the certificate for libel, and if successful in this action he intends to bring a similar suit against his wife.
