SUBURBAN SERVICE—CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

For some considerable time, Canadian Pacific officials have been studying plans to take care of their suburban traffic in such a manner that the same of standard service can be accomplished. Last year the service was very efficient, but the idea is to make it more so.

It has been definitely decided to give suburbanites and others ever more desirable facilities for traveling between the city and the various resorts.

With this end in view, practically the entire suburban service will become operative on April 30th, whereas in former seasons, there was only a partial service until the last week in May.

For example, the noon suburban on Saturdays will operate from the first Saturday in May to and from Welsford during that month, and Wednesday and Saturday during June, daily except Sunday thereafter. After April 29th there will be the early train into the city as last year, followed by the regular local Fredericton express.

By the way of a new departure, and effective April 30th, suburban will leave the city shortly after nine o'clock in the morning, local time, and on the return this train will arrive in the city shortly before noon. It is felt that this additional service will prove very popular as it gives housewives the opportunity of leaving their homes in the late morning, and return can be conveniently made on the evening train.

As usual, the regular Fredericton express will leave the city at 6:10 p.m. local time, followed by the 6:10 for Welsford, same as last year.

Starting on April 30th the evening suburban will arrive from Welsford about nine o'clock local time, and will leave the city again shortly after ten o'clock. This will afford a splendid opportunity for those who cannot use the afternoon train, or require to spend the evening in the city, to reach their homes in the country.

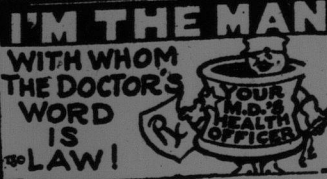

With the adoption of Daylight Saving Time, all schedules will be altered to conform accordingly. Then there will be the Sunday trains between St. John and Fredericton, starting Sunday, April 29th, which trains will make all suburban stops.

With this announcement so early in the season, summer residents will know just what to expect in the way of suburban service, and will be able to make their arrangements early and definitely. A great deal of favorable comment is being heard from the suburbanites by this action on the part of the Canadian Pacific.

HIGH SCHOOL ALUMNAE

At a meeting of the executive of the High School Alumnae held last evening at the home of Miss Grace Campbell, Hazen street, Hon. J. G. Forbes presented to the Alumnae the sum of $200, which he had collected in one week for the piano fund. The gift was gratefully accepted. Judge Forbes said he collected the money from prominent business men in the city, the members of which were graduates of the old Grammar School or the High School. As the Alumnae already had some $200 it was decided to go ahead with the purchase of a piano to replace the old one, which has outlived its usefulness. Arrangements were made for a Bliss Carmen evening, to be held in May in the Pythian Castle. There was some discussion as to the advisability of having the closing exercises of the High School in some larger building than the school assembly hall.

SIR MICHAEL SADLER SPEAKS IN FREDERICTON

A Fine Address on Education and What It Means to the Peoples of the World.

(Special to The Times.)

Fredricton, March 27.—A large audience was present at the city Opera House tonight when Sir Michael Sadler, K.C.S.I., C.B., L.L.D., vice-chancellor of the University of Leeds, Eng., delivered the opening address of his lecture tour of Canada, under the auspices of the National Education Council.

The Earl of Ashburnham occupied the chair. Others upon the platform were His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Todd, Dr. C. C. Jones, chancellor of the University of New Brunswick; Dr. H. V. B. Bridges, principal of the Provincial Normal School, and His Worship Mayor Reid. During the day Sir Michael visited the University of New Brunswick and expressed particular interest in the forestry. Later he visited the office of Lieutenant-Governor Todd and also the House of Assembly while the debate on the budget was in progress.

Sir Michael tonight outlined the great change which had taken place in education in the continent of Europe since the war. In Scotland, always considered classic ground, renewed attention was being given, and in England there had been general improvement including greatly improved salaries of teachers and a comprehensive national pension scheme.

The speaker divided education into three sections. The first of which the mother training, which should include in solution all the problems of education. This would be given by the mother. Following that would be the education of the younger children which would gradually expand to include what is generally recognized as education. Thirdly, there would be adult education, for liberal education can never end, but is a life process. It was a part of the happiness of the cultivated life. In this connection it was realized in Europe that improvement in the education of adults was necessary.

Alarmist Report.

There was heard often in regard to education the query, "Who is going to pay for this?" The Carnegie Corporation has issued what might be termed an alarmist report on the rising cost of education in the United States. In Europe reasons for economy had compelled them to do what never had been done before, to ascertain what actually was the cost of education. In his own University of Leeds it was found to a shilling what it cost to educate a student and further a calculation was made on the basis of the scale of salaries which it was hoped might be put into effect for the members of the teaching staff.

In this connection he wished to point out that education was the great stabilizing influence. It was not revolutionary in its tendency. In the present tendency toward disturbance in many countries it was a quieting influence. Labor and capital had been having numerous disputes which were terribly costly to other elements in the population. These disputes would have to become things of the past.

The modern movement in education was an indication that the world was moving from the old culture to a new. It may be that the future education would be shaped by conversation, relationship and contact with one's fellows. That state of affairs was the goal of modern education.

Chancellor Jones moved the vote of thanks which was seconded by Dr. Bridges in the course of appropriate remarks.

With the cheers of nearly 100 Boy Scouts ringing in his ears, Lieut.-General Sir Robert Baden-Powell departed yesterday afternoon for Ottawa on the Montreal train. The famous founder of the scouts spent a few moments previous to his departure chatting
