Mr. W. P. Archibald, Dominion Par-ole Officer, in an interview with The Standard this week, on the penological systems of imprisonment, said: "Imprisonment is the chief form of punishment for violators of the law, and it is the common and general pen-alty for crime. Fifty years ago im-prisonment was altogether and every-where punitive in its administration, ere punitive in its administration, where punitive in its administration, but now our penological systems have a distinctively new purpose, providing the industrial, the educational, and the psychological study and treatment of the criminal, all harmoniously working for the reconstruction of our anti-so-cial fellow-citizens. "It is altogether unnecessary to draw a contrast between the systems of im-
