

ABRUZZI FOR HELLENIC THRONE IF GEORGE QUILTS

Rome Has It That Popular Nobleman Is To Be Offered Kingdom of Greece.

In This Event Miss Elkins May Realize a Long-Coveted Ambition to Exercise Title.

A report from Rome says that the Greek army has decided to offer the crown to the Duke of Abruzzi should King George abdicate, as dispatches from Athens have hinted he may do as a result of the troubles arising out of the Cretan situation, which have already forced the Greek royal prince out of the army.

King George is now living in retirement at Tatoi since the recent military movement which resulted in a change of ministry, but he knows of the pressure and the possibility of another revolutionary move, and he instructed his three sons to resign. He then summoned Premier Mavromichalis and informed him that his plan was due to his reluctance to permit the chamber of deputies to suffer at the hands of the military revolutionists for its loyalty to the crown.

King George's position after this action and with the chamber completely dominated by the Greek Army Officers' league has seemed to many incompatible with his majesty's dignity and his retention of the throne.

Unfettered Hands. Should D'Abuzzi ascend the throne it is believed he will do so with unfettered hands, and the influence which has kept him from wedding his heart's desire will no longer act as a bar. George I, of Greece was selected to rule by the national assembly of Greece, in 1863, a year after the revolutionist King Otto.

King George was born a Danish prince. He was the son of the late King Christian IX and spent the early years of his life in the Danish army. He was but 17 when he became king of the Hellenes, having been born Dec. 24, 1846.

In 1867 he married the Grand Duchess Olga, daughter of the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, grand uncle of the present czar.

Prince Constantine, the crown prince of Greece, is 41. He married the daughter of Emperor Wilhelm of Germany, Princess Sophia. He is heir

New Ways to Comb the Hair

It still takes time to do up one's hair. New styles look simple, but in this case look deceiving. The contour of the coiffure is so astonishingly different that one can waste a lot of time in the effort to be fashionable. A light wire frame is placed about the head and over this is smoothly wrapped a long uncurled switch. In front is a puffy fringe about the face, and at the back is a soft large knot of hair. With the new fashion ribbon bows and bands may be worn and lower combs—which is a good thing for the health of the hair.

CASTELLANE AND OLD SPOUSE IN COURT AGAIN

Count Boni Wants Court To Direct That Penalty Be Paid for Nonfulfillment of Conditions of Divorce.

Paris, Oct. 22.—Count Boni de Castellane, having insisted that his former wife, who was Miss Anna Gould, place the three sons of the Castellane-Gould marriage in a certain boarding school, and the princess de Sagan having objected, on the grounds that the health of the children made such a step inadvisable, the case got into court today. The Count asked that the Princess be ordered to comply with his wishes in the matter, and further that the court provide a penalty for a neglect of its ordering the shape of a settlement upon the children of $100 per day for each day that their mother kept them from the school. Counsel for the Princess explained that his client was willing to place the children in the school as desired, and was only prevented from so doing by the condition of their health. The court promised a decision in the matter on October 29.

MRS. PANKHURST TELLS OF FIGHT

Militant English Suffragette Tells of Her Battles for Women, Her Imprisonment and Persecutions—Deluged With Questions At Her First Reception—Aims of Suffragettes Defined.

New York, Oct. 22.—No flag draped tug went down the bay to meet Mrs. Pankhurst, who has arrived on the White Star liner, Oceanic. Nor did any brass band play "Hail to the Chief" when the ship docked. There was of course some cheering, but it all came from about twenty suffragettes. Many more had planned to go down to welcome the English leader but the customs house officials limited the number of passes for the pier. Those present did the best they could in the way of shouting and waving green, white and purple banners, but they all looked as if they realized that it was a small demonstration to put up for a woman who is accustomed to collecting 20,000 persons of both sexes for a parade or a meeting by merely pressing a button or two in that famous desk in Clement's Inn.

Gray Cloak. Mrs. Pankhurst wore a gray traveling cloak over a dark blue tailor made suit and a gray fur turban draped with a brown mottled veil. She was very pale and there were deep shadows under the big gray eyes which have a wistful expression that serves to give a touch of pathos to her simplest remarks. She was obviously very tired and seemed disinclined to talk, although she made an effort to answer the questions that were put to her.

Those who hadn't had time to get in their greetings on the dock followed with all possible speed, and for at least an hour Mrs. Pankhurst was bombarded with questions which sometimes came so fast that she could only shake her head and look appealingly at Mrs. Blatch.

"Do you really think that militant methods are more effective than conservative ones, Mrs. Pankhurst?" asked a tall gray haired woman in a green frock.

"If I didn't I would hardly have pursued the course I have," replied Mrs. Pankhurst with a weary smile. "What was the hardest thing you ever did for suffrage?" asked a petite young woman who said she came from Boston.

Mrs. Pankhurst hesitated a moment and then said that she didn't remember that anything had seemed hard. "The hard part would be not to be doing anything," she added. "Isn't that a noble sentiment?" whispered several women.

Couldn't Starve. "I believe in suffrage," continued the one from Boston. "But I must confess that I can't imagine myself starving in prison for it." For the first time during the interview Mrs. Pankhurst's eyes flashed. "Ah," she exclaimed, "you don't believe enough?"

"But, do you think the American women are going to get the vote before you do?" chorused several voices. "I really am not in a position to express an opinion on that subject," was the reply. "I don't know anything about American politics, but I am sure if you do get it before we do you will have to get it very quickly, for we expect to get it before the Liberal party go out of power if they stay in their natural length of time—two years longer. You see it is impossible for you to understand our so-called militancy unless you know something of English politics. No reform is attained except by bringing pressure to bear on the Government, and to do this we must arouse the voters. Now you can't go to a workman and ask him to vote at all, but the principles he had held for years just because you want him to. But hundreds of workmen, however, have been converted to our cause by the women going to prison. Every sensational move that we made is designed to arouse the sympathy of the voters against the Government. We go to every by-election and try to defeat the Government candidate in order to make the Government see that they are losing ground with the voters. That is the only thing that ever really influences the Ministry."

Ready For Blood. "Do you think there will be any bloodshed in this struggle you are waging against the Liberals?" demanded a woman who had not spoken before. "I hope not," said the leader indifferently. "There are, however, many women who are ready to give their lives for the cause if necessary."

When asked what were the principal arguments now urged against granting the ballot to women Mrs. Pankhurst said that she didn't bear any arguments at all, but that she encountered a great deal of prejudice. At this point the crowd began an examination of the various badges worn by their victim. One was a silver miniature of the Rosettes monument and there was another in the shape of a medal inscribed "42H, 4," in memory of the cell she occupied during her term in prison.

"Will you have to go to prison when you go back?" inquired a questioner sympathetically. "That hasn't been decided yet," said Mrs. Pankhurst. "It all rests upon the question as to whether the Bill of Rights which grants the privilege of presenting a petition in person, is pronounced obsolete or whether it is still form a part of the law of England. I don't much care which way it comes out. On the one hand Mr. Asquith and the Government will be judged guilty of illegal imprisonment, and on the other hand they will have 84 women to sentence."

Why Stanfield's Use Nova Scotia Wool

THE chief reason is because the Stanfields have never found any other wool that makes Underwear so peculiarly suited to Canadians.

The salty, ocean breezes and healthful climate, coupled with the rich grazing, give Nova Scotia wool a quality which is not found anywhere else.

Nova Scotia wool is perfectly blended. It is soft and smooth, yet staunch and strong. It can be spun like silk and wears almost like steel. Garments, knitted of this fine wool, give the desired warmth and are not heavy or bulky.

It is no exaggeration to say that the Stanfields get the pick of the Nova Scotia wool. The founder of these mills did much to develop the sheep-raising industry throughout the Maritime Provinces. The farmers saved their best wool for him, and continue to send their high grade wool to the Stanfield mills.

Then, too, this wool reaches the mills in the best possible condition. There are no long railroad hauls—no lengthy journeys in the holds of tramp steamers. The wool is shipped direct to Truro as soon as sheared. Experts sort, clean and make it ready at once for its trip of transformation into Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear.

Stanfield's Underwear is made by the only process which takes the shrink out of the wool before the garments are knitted. The value of this discovery—made by the founder of the Stanfield Mills—is shown by the growth of this business, which is now capitalized at $750,000.00 and employs over 300 operatives.

Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear is made in 3 standard weights, Light (Red Label), Medium (Blue Label) and Heavy (Black Label) and in 17 other weights and qualities to suit the requirements of every man and woman.

The best dealers everywhere handle Stanfield's Underwear. Catalogue showing styles, and samples of fabric, sent free for your address.
