The Widow's Son

By Mrs. E. Southworth

"I don't know. At any rate, I don't like to think that it was through my reminiscences that you are late for the first time. I was going to say that I wish you had had me called."

"No, I would not have done so except upon a much greater emergency than existed. I knew that you and Lily May must have passed a disturbed night for I heard you talking at a late hour. And I wished you to take your full rest this morning." "That was like your kindness, Owen. But I was the only sluggard. Lily May was up and dressed at her usual hour, you know. And as you would not have me called, I wish you hadn't waited for me, but had taken your breakfast without me."

"Ah little sister, you know my weakness. I would fast for hours rather than miss the pleasure of breakfasting with you and Lily May," smiled the good brother. "Well you had Lily May. Why did you not take your breakfast together, instead of waiting so long for me, to the mortification of your appetites and the neglect of your business?"

"But I hadn't. If she is up, she is not down, for I haven't seen or heard anything of her this morning."

"Not seen or heard of her this morning? Oh, then, I suppose she came down the back way, and went into the garden to gather flowers for the breakfast table. She will be here in a moment," said Lily Gay, going to the table and beginning to occupy herself with setting the dishes in a more symmetrical order than Nancy had placed them.

"How were her spirits? Was she more cheerful when alone than she was when down here?" inquired Owen anxiously.

"She was more composed, for she sat down and wrote some chapters of her story, and you know she would not have done that if her mind had not been quiet, especially as it was not a work of necessity, that she was obliged to do, but one of pure amusement. She wrote until after midnight, and it was my expostulations which urged her to leave off and come to bed, that you heard. But you know how it is with Lily May. When she is 'in the vein, as she calls it, she will write half the night."

"I must break her of that bad habit," said Owen, smiling.

"At this moment Nancy entered with the coffee-pot in one hand and a plate of muffins in the other, both of which she set upon the table saying:

"Well, my hopes, as for the future, whoever unlocks the front door after I lock it at night will either lock it again themselves, or if they're too lazy to do it, will call me."

"Why, Nancy, what do you mean with your talk of locking and unlocking? What has happened? Who has vexed you?" inquired Owen.

"All of you have, with your don't careish doings." "But how? In what respect?"

"You know well enough. Spouse I like to get up some morning with my brains blown out and find the house robbed and all on you dead in your beds, with nothing left to live on!"

"That would be a stupendous, an incomprehensible horror, indeed," said Owen laughing.

"Well you may jeer and laugh but it is just what will happen one of these days, and then you'll laugh on the other side of your mouth. I reckon what has put it into your good thick head to predict such an awful calamity?" inquired Owen.

"You know well enough."

"Indeed, I do not," who left the front door unlocked?"

"No one did. I was the last to retire, and before going to my room I made my usual round of inspection to see that all was fast, and I remember perfectly well that the front door was both locked and bolted."

"It was well. Well, as all I know is, as I was the first one up this morning, and when I came down, the first thing I saw was the front door unlocked and unbolted. And I was so took aback, as I said to myself: 'Well some morning every one of us will get up with our brains out and the house gutted!'"

"What a horrible consummation. But, Nancy really I do not understand about the door. I am quite certain I left it fastened. Did you examine to see if everything was safe?"

"Yes, certainly everything was safe, nobody killed, and nothing was stolen, no thanks to whoever left the door open last night."

"Oh, Nancy, dear, never mind the door now. As everything is safe we need not talk any more about it, only we must be more careful another time. Now go go call Lily May in to breakfast," said Lily Gay.

Nancy started to go upstairs.

"Oh she is not there—she is in the garden, Nancy," said Lily Gay.

"She's who?" inquired the woman, hesitating and holding by the balcony rods.

"She's in the garden."

"In the garden? No, me sinit nuther. That I'll take my davy on. There sinit nobody passed out of this house into the garden this morning I know. The back door ain't even been opened. I can see it from here with the bars up still—Garden."

"Oh, Nancy, now I know how the front door came open. Lily May passed out of it, and around by the side gate into the garden. That is how it was. Now go and call her—that is a good soul and tell her we are waiting breakfast," said Lily Gay.

With a grunt of disapprobation Nancy started on this errand. But she had nearly gone when the door-bell rang sharply. Owen jumped up to answer the summons.

"Who is it, Owen? Oh I know. Certainly it is Lily Gay, come round to see-on by the back way she went out, and finding herself locked out by Nancy's blundering scituation."

A New Blood-Feed Called Ferrozone. Sues to Restore you Quickly.

Every day comes the good news of wonderful cures with Ferrozone. In Peterboro' it worked marvels for Louis Mechan—put him right on his feet—made him entirely well. "About three years ago," says Mr. Mechan, "I had the Grippe which left me in a very run-down condition that finally developed into Dyspepsia. I was unable to eat but a few things and had a craving for acid. I gave up treating with the doctors because they did not help me and on the advice of a friend used Ferrozone. It not only cured me of Dyspepsia and Biliousness, but has built up my strength to what it was before I had the Grippe. I can recommend Ferrozone as an ideal restorative." Ferrozone gives you force, energy, vim.

It strengthens the stomach, cures indigestion, prevents headaches—guarantees good health. Thousands use Ferrozone—they all feel better; try it yourself—sold in 50c. boxes, six for $2.50 at all dealers or direct from The Catarhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Hurry in my dear, we have been waiting for you," said Lily Gay, who certain she felt of being right in her conjecture. Not Lily May's gentle tones however, answered her, but a cheerful manly voice spoke which called the rich blood into Lily Gay's cheeks. And William Spicer, Jr., now grown to be a handsome and a promising undergraduate of the medical college, stood before her.

"Oh Willie I am so glad to see you. When did you arrive?" she inquired rapt, flushed, but happy to receive him.

"Just this moment, I may say. I left Rogers' Harbor yesterday morning reached Baltimore last evening, took the night train north, and arrived at New York an hour ago. I came straight from the station here—that is to say as straight as the relative position of the two points would admit of," said William Spicer, smiling.

"Then you have not breakfasted yet."

"Breakfasted. Now Wynne, you know very well that I understand dietetics too well to trust my health to the tender mercies of railway station caterers. Breakfasted? NO. And I see that you have not, either although it is nearly ten o'clock. Pray, are you contracting lazy city habits?"

"Not exactly. Our lateness this morning id quite accidental," said Owen.

"Nancy! another cup and saucer here! Oh I forgot, she has gone after Lily May. I will go and fetch them myself," said Lily Gay, rising from the table and running into the kitchen.

"How is your friend Lily May?" inquired William Spicer.

"She is quite well! She has gone into the garden. I believe, to gather the usual morning bouquet, with which she delights to deck the breakfast table. You are here for the winter?"

"Yes. This is the last course of lectures I shall be called upon to attend. I hope to graduate with some honor in the spring."

ARE THE DAYS OF MIRACLES OVER?

IS SUPERSTITION AND FALSE BELIEF TO OVERSHADOW FACTS ANY LONGER?

When a woman who has been sick for years becomes well after taking a certain scientific preparation—can you deny that the remedy must be good? Read these extracts taken from a letter written to me by Mrs. E. Cross, of 363 King Street West, Toronto:

"I suffered for several years with inflammatory Rheumatism and could hardly get up or down stairs. My husband bought me a box of Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules, and almost immediately I felt relief. The swelling started to go down and the stiffness left my knees. I might say that previously to using T.R.C.'s I had tried almost everything under the sun without success. I am a happier and wiser woman now, and I cannot thank you enough for the aid T.R.C.'s have given me."

It's the same story from hundreds of other Rheumatic sufferers. They tried T.R.C.'s and T.R.C.'s fixed them up. If you suffer, try them.

Ask your Druggist or write us for our new booklet: it is interesting and costs you nothing (Templeton, 142 King West, Toronto) mail T.R.C.'s envelope on receipt of $1.00. Sole Agents for Kitchener, E. J. Ritz & Co., Druggists, For Waterloo, A. S. Leach, Dispensing Chemist.
