

WUSC takes UNB students to South America

UNB students interested in spending two months next summer studying and travelling in Peru and elsewhere in South America are being offered a unique opportunity to do so by World University Service of Canada. Applications are now being accepted for the twenty-second WUSC international seminar, in which forty Canadian students and five faculty members will take part. All

Canadian students who will be returning to UNB in 1972-73 are eligible to apply for the seminar, which is aimed at providing them with an opportunity to widen their knowledge and appreciation of the peoples, problems and cultures of other nations as well as offering them a greater understanding of Canada and its role in international affairs. Four to six weeks will be spent visiting different areas of Peru, and the seminar programme will include an examination of historical, political, economic, scientific and cultural aspects of the country. Although the programme will be quite intensive, some time will be provided for participants to pursue specific academic interests, and time for independent travel will be available on the completion of the formal programme.

Participants will be assigned to study groups and must write an essay and book reports from suggested lists. Fluency in Spanish is not a condition for application. Selected participants, however, will be urged to undertake an intensive study of Spanish in order to benefit from the opportunities they encounter.

Cost to the individual student will be largely underwritten by WUSC, and local financial help may also be made available.

Application forms and further information are available from Dick Myers, phone 454-5247, and from Prof. Stan Atherton, English Department, St. Thomas University, phone 475-3337, ext. 29. Application forms should be picked up by November 10th; and the deadline for submitting them is November 15th.

Mugwump Journal

Have you felt the ominous presence of STU lately? Some pseudo-intellectuals painted the letters "STU" all over the campus last week, notably around the Student Union Building. It isn't known yet for sure, but many doubt that STU people were responsible for it. According to a SUB official, it was more than likely a UNB student that did it.

That still doesn't make it very smart.

Speaking of STU, it seems that STU-SRC President Jim Gallagher (alias John Smith for those of you who were around last year) has decided that STU won't participate in the UNB carnival again this year. According to my sources, TC apparently doesn't have the same identity crisis that has been plaguing STU for the last while. They (TC) will more than likely participate in this year's carnival but, true to form, stick-in-the-mud STU sits defiantly up the hill in a vain attempt to isolate itself from the world.

Didn't get much reaction from last week's column. Tsk. I must be losing my touch.

Uncle Sam, oblivious to world opinion, is going to make an attempt to blow us all up. Here's hoping he fails. Seems to be doing a lot of that lately, hasn't he.

The Telecrap Urinal, supposedly UNOWHO's best paper, made a startling report last week. On page three they featured a real goodie on an 80 year old shovel that was being retired on the North Shore. If that's the best, I'd hate to see the worst. Unfortunately, if one is to read any Fredericton news he must read that paper - the worse, I mean - the Cleaner.

Apologies of the week... This, more by accident than plan, is becoming a regular feature of the JOURNAL. This week I get my hands slapped by none other than the Registrar. Students CAN see the records that are kept on them in his office. Sorry about that folks, my sources screwed up (again). Hopefully, I'll have more on this next week.

A lot of Business people are wondering what I've got against booze. The answer - nothing. My gripe is not against people getting happy, but against having massive "faculty weeks" so everyone can go out, get loaded to the gills, and then make fools of themselves. My contention is that 20 year old university students must have something better to do than barf all over the place.

The trash is on the ground

Garbage cans on campus? Why the hell not? Lloyd Dawson head of the department in maintenance appears to have a concise answer "If garbage cans were available the students would not only throw litter but the cans also."

The cans were made available many years ago, how many could not be resolved. They proved to be ineffective so other methods were started.

One man has steady employment as a litter picker and frequently two more are employed. This cost was not specified. Mr. Dawson predicted that it would take the same amount of labor to pick up the garbage if the cans were available. He also stated that it would cost more to maintain garbage cans than to pay these men to pick garbage.

The attitude of maintenance seems unfair toward students and an opportunity should be given for students to prove they are responsible enough to use garbage facilities. If the government feels garbage cans are more practical for the province surely we deserve the same respect from Maintenance.

Gamblers for a worthwhile cause

By MARIA WAWER

Gambling at Lady Dunn Hall?

Has this vice, too, found its way into those hallowed halls?

Yes, but for a worthwhile cause.

Second floor T-wing organized a hockey pool to raise funds for the Lady Dunn Hall Christmas Children's Welfare Party. For 25 cents, UNB's high stakes gamblers were given a chance to guess upon the time the winning goal would be scored in the Wednesday, October 27 game between Montreal Canadians and the Boston Bruins.

Winner: "Crystall Ball" Reg Watson, Jones House.

Prize: $4.10 (10 per cent of the total collected.)

Organizers of the hockey pool would like to thank all who contributed. The party, in past years, has always been a great success with the children, and all such support for this cause is appreciated.
