

"A remarkable book."—Chicago Tribune

The Angel of Pain

BY E. F. BENSON

Author of "The Challoners," "The Image in the Sand," "Dodo," etc., etc.

THIS genuine love story takes the reader among beautiful country scenes in England, and tells of a great sacrifice for love. It involves the happiness of two men who were great friends, but in love with the same woman. The disappointment of one causes their estrangement, though they finally are united as brothers for a time by the "Angel of Pain." The character of Tom Merivale brings into the book a touch of the supernatural. A hermit by choice, he lived in a forest and possessed a strange power over birds and beasts, with whom he talked familiarly.

"One of the best of the present-day novels."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

"Marie Corelli herself could not have invented a more wonderful character than Tom Merivale."—Baltimore News.

"A distinct achievement; it far exceeds anything its talented author has previously produced."—Newark Evening News.

12 mo. Cloth, $1.50

J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia