

12th September, 1795.

SIR,

THE following observations contain the substance of Mr. Glenie's Address to the Electors of the County, just before the opening of the Poll in that County, on the first Day of this Month. I took them down in short hand as correctly as I could. As they made a deep impression on the minds of the Electors, were listened to with the most profound silence succeeded by a burst of applause, and furnish the best account, I have met with, of the proceedings of the last House of Assembly, on which some persons have attempted to throw a great deal of obloquy, I embrace this opportunity of transmitting them to you for Publication, at the request of a large majority of the Electors.

I am, Sir,

Your most obedient humble Servant,

A Bystander.

To the PRINTER.
