GOSSIP.

"Yes," said the friend of the family, "they were married in haste." "And repented at leisure, eh?" queried the other. "Oh, no," was the reply: "they repented in haste also."

"Is it true," asked the interviewer, "that when you first came to this country you worked in your shirt-sleeves for a living?" "It is not," replied the successful public man, indignantly. "Ah! No offense, I hope." "When I came here," continued the successful man, "I didn't have a shirt."

I was travelling down south, said John S. Flaherty, the theatre manager, and while driving in the country I saw a colored man under a tree by the roadside. He was gazing lazily up through the branches, while by his side was a hoe. Weeds were growing luxuriantly in the cornfield, which stretched over acres into the distance.

"What are you doing?" I asked the negro.

"I'se out heah to hoe dat corn," said he.

The answer was given in an unmitigated drawl. "Then what are you doing under the tree? Resting?" I persisted.

"No, sah, I'se not restin'," was the answer. "Ah'm not tired. Ah'm waitin' faw the sun to go down so Ah kin quit wuhk."

A southern planter employed a negro to work some of his land during the last year on shares. On account of the high price of cotton the negro's half of the proceeds amounted to $1,600. The planter knew that it would ruin any Afro-American to get such a sum of money, and decided that half of it would be enough. Upon further reflection the conviction grew upon him that $800 would ruin any negro in the world, so he cut the sum in half again, and, piling four hundred shining silver dollars on his desk, sent for the negro and brother, and said that he was ready to settle. The man came in and fairly gasped at the amount of wealth in sight.

"Fo' Gawd, boss," he said, "is dat money all ours?"

"Yes."
"Well, den, divide it in two ples, and you take youah half and I'll take mine."

When the May baby and the June baby got well acquainted they exchanged confidences.

"My milk comes from the certified cow," said the May baby.

"So does mine," said the June baby. "It is milked by a man in a white suit, with sterilized hands, through absorbent cotton, and kept at a temperature of forty-five degrees."

"So is mine."
"It is brought to me in a prophylactic waggon drawn by a modified horse."

"So is mine."
"Then how in thunder do you manage to be so fat and well?"

The June baby winked slyly.

"I chew old paper and the corners of the rugs and anything I can find that is dirty, and in that way I manage to maintain the bacterial balance which is essential to health," he said chuckling.

The May baby laughed long and loud. "So do I," said he.

The mammas heard the goo-gooing, but they assigned to it only the usual fantastic significance. It was just as well.

WOUNDS BY RUSTY NAILS.

Every little while we read in the papers that someone has stuck a rusty nail in his foot or hand or other portion of the body, and lockjaw resulted therefrom, and that the patient died. If every person were aware of a perfect remedy for all such wounds and would apply it, then such reports would cease. The remedy is simple, always on hand, and can be applied by anyone; and, what is better, it is infallible. It is simply to smoke the wound or any bruise or wound that is inflamed, with burning woollen cloth. Twenty minutes in the smoke will take the pain out of the worst case of inflammation arising from such a wound. People may sneer at this remedy as they please, but when they are afflicted by such wounds just let them try it.
