QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Veterinary.

GREASE.

Horse has a bunch like a bunch of grapes on his leg, between hoof and fetlock joint. When not kept clean it discharges a fetid fluid. The leg swells when he stands. Is this contagious?

F. H.

Ans.—This is a case of grease. The little lumps, which are called grapes, should be removed or practically cut off with a red-hot firing iron with a sharp edge. The raw surfaces should then be dressed three times daily until healed with one part carbolic acid to twenty parts sweet oil. Give him a purgative of 8 drams aloes and 2 drams ginger, and follow up with 2 ozs. Fowler's solution of arsenic twice daily for a week. It is not contagious.

V.

CHRONIC THROAT TROUBLE.

Horse has an irregular discharge from his nostrils all the time. Part of his food escapes from his nostrils after mastication. The glands of his throat are swollen and he coughs some. He snorts as if there were some throat irritation. He seems healthy and fat, but is short of wind when exerted.

E. B. J.

Ans.—This has become chronic, and it is doubtful whether a recovery will take place. There may be some growth in either the nostrils or the back part of mouth. It would be wise to have him examined by a veterinarian, and, if necessary, operated upon. If nothing of this kind is present, rub the throat well twice daily for two or three days, with three parts each of raw linseed oil and oil of turpentine and one part liquor ammonia fortior. Give him one dram iodide of potassium three times daily. If this effects his appetite reduce to 40-grain doses.

V.

DEVELOPING ACTION, ETC.

1. What is the best way to shoe to develop action? Would you shoe the same in winter as in summer?

2. Mare has capped hock.

3. Mare salivates a great deal when eating oats.

B. A. M.

Ans.—1. Shoe with flat shoes of considerable weight, without calkins. The shoes should weigh from one to two pounds, according to the weight with which the horse goes best. They should be slightly thicker at the heel, and the toe should be rounded off so as to cause him to pick his feet quickly. In the winter time calkins are necessary, hence there should be small ones on the heels, but none at the toe.

2. This is hard to reduce. Take 4 drams each of iodine and iodide of potassium, and 4 ozs. each of glycerine and alcohol. Mix and rub a little well in once daily, of blister repeatedly—say, every four weeks. Details for blistering are frequently given in these columns.

3. Her teeth are at fault. Have them dressed by a veterinarian.

V.

FATAL INDIGESTION.

I drove a horse 22 miles in five hours. When put into the stable and fed he would not eat and seemed dull, lay down, etc. I thought he had colic, and I gave him medicine, but he got worse. I then drove him about six miles and he was still no better. I doctored him all night and he got worse all the time. He would roll, groan, and breathe heavily. Towards morning he bloated hard, and stood on his feet until he fell down dead.

M. D.

Ans.—Your horse suffered from indigestion, probably caused by an extra feed before starting, and then being driven for five hours; but these cases frequently occur without appreciable cause. You do not say how you treated him, but you made a great mistake in driving him six miles while the symptoms were becoming worse. It is very probable that prompt treatment by a veterinarian would have saved your horse's life. He should have been kept quiet and comfortable, and a veterinarian would have given him a hypodermic injection of about 1½ grains of eserine, or 1 grain of arecoline. The best drench you could have given would have been 2 ozs. oil of turpentine, 1 oz. fluid extract of belladonna, and a pint of raw linseed oil. This drench, with water instead of oil, should be repeated every three hours as long as necessary.
