Parcel Post and Cost of Living.

Readers of the newspapers may perhaps notice the increasing frequency of news items telling of the parcel post preparations in the local post-offices. Interest in the coming service is not confined to the mercantile classes. It is shared by the workingman, by the farmer and by the housekeeper. None of them have grasped what a cheap parcel post may portend in the way of reducing the cost of living, and of adding to the conveniences of communication, but there is a strong public expectation of its benefits. The tremendous success of the United States parcel post has been well advertised in Canada. Its widespread usefulness to all classes of the community—except of course, the express interests—has led Canadians to look forward with eagerness to the time when their new service goes into operation.

If a cheap parcel post were chiefly of value in lowering transportation costs to the merchants there would not be so much pleasurable anticipation by the community in general. The lowering of freight rates would have a secondary interest, personally, for the masses. It is because the new postal service should help to make a straight, direct cut at the cost of living, particularly at the cost of farm products to the city consumer, that the community interest is so warm. The people are keen enough to see that while tariffs have some relation to the cost of food, so have the arrangements for getting foodstuffs from the farmers to the city consumers. Canada is producing enough food for its own people, except in a few lines, and the problem of reducing the cost is more a matter of quick and direct movement from producer to consumer than of rushing in foreign supplies. If it could be shown that the Canadian farmers are getting too much for what they produce there would be every reason for trying to get foreign foodstuffs cheaper to keep down the cost. But who says the farmer is getting too much? Is not the question rather one of simplifying the distribution of food—in other words, of promoting, as far as possible, direct dealing.

A Pickle Was Wanted.

An English lord was travelling through this country with a small party of friends. At a farm-house the owner invited the party in for supper. The good housewife, while preparing the table, discovering that she was entertaining nobility, was nearly overcome with surprise and elevation. All seated at the table, scarcely a moment's peace did she grant to her distinguished guest in her endeavor to serve and please him. It was "My Lord will you have some of this?" and "My Lord, do try that." "Take a piece of this my Lord," until the meal was nearly finished. The little four-year-old son of the family, heretofore unnoticed, during a moment of supreme quiet saw his lordship trying to reach the pickle dish, which was just out of his reach, and turning to his mother said: "Say, ma, God wants a pickle."

May Result Fatally.

An accident that may prove fatal happened at the new Walkerton dam Saturday afternoon. John Snyder, a workman, and John Rowland jr., were on a scow loaded with gravel on the upper side of the dam. When about half way out in the river the scow took a turn with the current and both jumped to save themselves. Rowland cleared himself and got to the dam, but Snyder went down and got tangled up in some old logs. Rowland immediately jumped back in the water and succeeded in getting Snyder in a position to be pulled out with ropes. He was taken to the hospital and with the shock and exposure his recovery is doubtful.

Paying the Men.

An innovation has been introduced by the G. T. R. in their method of paying the men. Instead of a pay car going over the system, the cheques are to be forwarded to the Divisional office, where the men will call for their wages. The pay of the section men and others employed at distant points will be handed to the bosses of the different gangs, who will in return hand it to the men. This is the system which has been in operation in C. P. R. since—

Hair Hints

Worthy the Attention of People Who Wish to Preserve The Hair.

Always have your own brush and comb at home or at hair dresser's. Never use a brush or comb found in public places, they are usually covered with dandruff germs.

Wash your hair brush weekly with soap and warm water to which may be added an antiseptic.

Shampoo the hair every week or so with pure soap and water.

Use Parisian Sage every day, rubbing thoroughly into the scalp.

Parisian Sage, which comes in a large 50 cent bottle, is guaranteed by John Coates to destroy dandruff germs and abolish dandruff—to stop hair from falling and scalp from itching, or money refunded.

To put life and beauty into dull—dry or faded hair and make it soft and fluffy surely use Parisian Sage—it is one of the quickest acting hair tonics known.
