tem was best adapted to make the government accountable to the people. The proposed change had to come, and he believed it was politics to introduce it now. The government called itself a coalition, but he found that the patronage departments in the province were operated against the Conservatives in federal affairs. During the session at Ottawa ihis matter had been talked over on the occasion of Dr. Stockton's visit. It was then thought best to take the voice of the party in general convention, and he asked now for the verdict. He believed that the Emmerson government had intended to spring an election ahead of the convention, but the convention was here now and would deliver its message.

as it stood sufficiently expressed the party sentiment. It made no reference to the past, and busy Conservatives who had been supporting the local government could now without humiliation withdraw from that position and fall into line on ferms of perfect equality with the rest. Mr. Murray of Albert had no faith in coalitions. Even Premier Emmerson BABY'S WELFARE

Dr. Stockton was glad to hear the expressions of opinion of the majority. They agreed with the views he had make for the past; the meeting was censuring no one, but was laying down a course of future action, Dr. Stockton went on to say that the proposed method was the only way to fix the responsibility for government on any ministry. He would accept the declaration of the party and would act on it. Mr. McAllister, M. The two local members were satisfied with the present situation, and he had no complaint to make against this course. But if it was decided that the Conservative party should adopt the course proposed he was with his party. Dr. Alward discussed the record of the local government in a brief and forcible speech.
