A Public Official's Sad Experience With Hair Dye. A prominent public official began to show signs of baidness, and then rather surprised his friends by ap-pearing with a dicek, well-groom d crop of dark hair. For some time no one suspected a wig: But a few days ago he appeared with the usual dark brown hair, but a sharp line, from the tips of the ears, marked a strong contrast, for the hair bilaw the line was of the bright golden hue which is the pride of the "chem-ical blondes." It was found out that the man found his natural hair was turning gray and desired to make it match the wig, so h i nested in a pr pirt-tion warranted to darken the hir, and in the secret of his own room applied it. But, owing to some strange chemical combination, in-stead of making, the silvered hair dark it made the dark hair golden, and so far the unfortunate man has found nothing that will counteract the striking contrast, so he is com-pelled to endure no small amount of chaffing from his friends.-Philadel-phia Record. osculation has been published in London by Christopher Nyrop, apropos don by Christopher Nyrop, apropos of which the London Chronicle has this to say: Things that happen under one's very nose are precisely the things it does not occur to us to investi-gate. And, if we may suggest an ap-propriate portmanteau word, Dr. Nyrop shows inmself a very learned-and entertaining kisstorian. What, then, is a kiss? We cannot accept the French cynic's comparison of a kiss to the harmless bullet of the average duel as a definition. Still kiss to the harmless builet of the average duel as a definition. Still less does the "Dictionary of the Dam-ish Philological Society" know about it. "A pressure of the mouth against a body !! "That is just like a philolo-gical society. Mr. Squeers' method was far more satisfactory. Learn to speal it and then go and do it, and you can do without the definition, However, division is easier than de-finition, and in this matter other languages put us to the blush. Even the Romans had three words to ex-press the kiss, and according to the (Natural Science Magazine.) Lord Avebury declares that ants that maintain their sobriety make a great distinction in their treatment of the intoxicated stranger and the fellow citizen who has succumbed to his blandishments. He inebriated fifty ants, twenty-five from one next and his blandishments. He inebriated flity ants, twenty-five from one nest and twenty-five from another, and put them all into the nest from which one lot had been taken. The inhabitants at once took the helpless strangers The Romans had three words to ex-press the kiss, and according to the nature of the recipient distributed "oscula, basia and suavia." But in Luglish the same word has to do duty for the nephew's peck at his annts' forehead and the first rapturons salute of the ac-cepted lover. German gives a tre-mendous choice of kisses, for Dr. Ayrop has found over thirty vari-eties mentioned and defined in Ger-man dictionaries, though he has not noted that the logical fallacy of cross-division is perpetuated. For example, there is no reason why a "Liebeskuss" should not be a "Morgenkuss" and a "Pantoffel-kuss" at the same time, though the evening does seem a more appro-printe time to kiss the lady's site. at once took the helpless strangers and threw them into the water; while those who were citizens of the nest were carried tenderly away into remote corners to recover from their festivity at leisure.
