BELLS IN CHURCHES.

FIRST USED BY PAULINUS, BISHOP OF NOLA, ABOUT 400.

The Early British Christians Used Wooden Rattles to Call the People Together For Worship - Bells and Thunder and Lightning.

Church bells are of ancient origin. A woman who lives in an inland town, while going to a convention in a The ancients had bells for both sacred and profane purposes. Strabo says distant city, spent one night of the journey on board a steamboat. It was that market time was announced by the first time she had ever traveled by water. She reached her journey's end their sound and Pliny that the tomb of an ancient king of Tuscany was extremely fatigued. To a friend who hung round with bells. The hour of remarked it she replied:
"Yes, I'm tired to death. I don't bathing was made known in ancient know that I care to travel by water again. I read the card in my state-Rome by the sound of a bell. The night watchman carried one, and it served to call up the servants in great houses. Sheep had them tied about their necks to frighten away wolves, or, rather, by way of amulet.

Paulinus, bishop of Nola, is generally considered the first person who introduced bells into ecclesiastical service about the year 400. Historians say that in 610 the bishop of Orleans, being at Seno, then in a state of siege, fright-ened away the besieging army by ringing St. Stephen's church bells, which is a clear proof that they were not at that time generally known in France. The first large bells are mentioned by Bede in the year 680. Before that period the early British Christians made use of wooden rattles to call the congregation of the faithful together. Hand bells probably first appeared at religious processions and were after-ward used by the seculars. The small bells were not always held in the hand. They were sometimes suspended upon a stake and struck with ham

"Last year at this time I suffered with a tremendous itching on my back, which grew worse and worse, until it spread over the whole body, and only my face and hands were free. For four months or so I suffered the torments of the damned, and I had to scratch, scratch, scratch, until I bled. At night when I went to bed things got worse, and I had at times to get up and scratch my body all over, until I was as sore as could be, and until I suffered excruciating pains. I did not know what it was, and resorted to a number of blood purifiers, using at times also Cuticura Soap. They told me then that I was suffering from eczema. Then I made up my mind that I would also use Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Resolvent. I used them according to instructions, and very soon indeed I was greatly relieved. The arrival of kings and great per sonages was anciently greeted by ringing the church bells. Inguiohus, abbo of Croyland, who died about 1109, speaks of them as being well known in his time and says that "the first abbot of Croyland gave six bells to that monastery—that is to say, two great ones, which he named Bartholomew and Beladine; two of a medium size, called Turketulium and Bettrine; two small ones, denominated Pega and Bega. He also caused the great bell to be made called Gudla, which was tuned to the other bell and produced an admirable harmony not to be equaled in Eng-

I continued until well, and now I am ready to recommend the Cuticura Remedies to any one who suffers as did your obedient servant. Mrs. Mary Metzger, Sweetwater, Okla., June 28, 1905."

Ing brass or silver rings at the ends for the hand. They were anciently rung by the priests themselves, afterward by the servants and sometimes by those incapable of other duties, as persons who were blind.

The deciring of the Church of Rome

The doctrine of the Church of Rome concerning bells is that they have merit and pray God for the living and the dead; second, that they produce devotion in the hearts of the faithful. The TORTURING, DISFIGURING Humours, Eczemas, and Itchings dislike of evil spirits to bells is well expressed by Wynken de Worde in the "Golden Legend." The passing bell was The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of scalp, as in scalled head—all demand a remedy of almost anciently rung for two good purposes, one to be peak the prayers of all good one to be speak the prayers of all good Christian people for a soul just departing and the other to drive away the evil spirits who stood at the foot of the bed or about the house. Such was the general opinion respecting the efficacy of bells before the reformation, but since that period "it has been the usual course in the Church of England that when any sick person lay dying a bell should toll to give notice to the neighbors that they might pray for the superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills are such stands proven beyond all doubt. Sold throughout the world. Cuticurs Sosp. Will adores me in pale pink, while Max says I'm an angel in blue. I can't have but called a passing bell, because the sick person was passing belt, because the sick person was passing hence to another world, and when his breath was ex-pired the bell rung out that the neigh-bors might cease their prayers, for that the party was dead." It is now only one gown, so you see my whole future depends on the color I select. It is Courage is resistance to fear, mastery tolled after death.

The saint's bell was not so called from the name of the saint that was inscribed on it or of the church to which it belonged, but because it was always rung out when the priest came to that part of the service, "Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus, Domine Deus Sabbaoth," purposely that those persons who could not come to church might HEALTH AND MANLY VIGOR RESTORED know in what a solemn office the congregation were at that instant engaged and so, even in their absence, be once, at least, moved to lift up their hearts to him who made them. Bells at one time were thought an effectual charm against lightning. The frequent firing of abbey churches by lightning confuted the proud motto commonly written on their bells in the steeples. wherein each entitled itself to a sixfold efficacy-viz:

Men's death I tell by doleful knell; disc. and has for recognized as season and the second as the second and has for recognized as season second and has for second and has for second and has for second as season season season season and has for the winds so fierce I dost disperse; men's cruel rage I do assuage.

The "If" Is Rather Important. Here's something that may save your life when a bull gets after you: When a bull charges, just before the final lurch he shuts his eyes, and if you have the presence of mind to stand stock still until he is, about two or three feet from you all you have to do is to step aside, and he misses you. Any child with sufficient presence of mind to do this can let a bull charge all day with perfect safety. This is not a new thing, as it is one of the secrets of the bullfighter in the countries where the sport is practiced. The bullfighters say that a cow does not do this, and they would never try any such tricks with a mad cow.

A Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherrybark, Golden Searcot, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduling chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of fiesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and alds the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherrybark in promoting digestion and building up the fiesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure very severe, obstinate, chronic coughs, bronchial and laryngeal troubles, and chronic sore throat with hoarseness. In acute coughs it is not so effective. It is in the lingering coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures. Send for and read the little book of extracts, treating of the properties and uses of the several medicinal roots that enter into Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and learn why this medicine has such a wide range of application in the cure of diseases. It is sent free. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. The "Discovery" contains no alcohol or harmful, habit-forming drug. Ingredients all printed on each bottle wrapper in plain English.

Sick people, especially those suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Dr. Piefce by fetter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly of the Riviera.

King Edward's experience with earthquakes, although of a restricted character, is sufficiently entertaining to be placed on record, writes the Marquise de Fontenoy. It may be remembered that about 15 years ago there was quite a severe earthquake along the French and Italian Riviera, which bowled over a number of badly constructed buildings, knocked others out of plumb, and created a good deal of alarm. It came very suddenly during the night time. The walls of every room in the hotel where King Edward, then Prince of Wales, was staying, groaned. The floors creaked and the furniture rattled. All the dogs in it howled together, and the noisy macaw in the manager's office screeched at the top of his voice. Then came a juli, as sudden as the disturbance, and the smothered sound of many shippered feet, and soft, rustling gowns were hurrying along the corridors and down the marble stairs. And the prince? At the first suggestion of danger his faithful equerry, Gen. Sir Stanley Clarke, bounded out of bed, and making his way across the smoking saloon, knocked at the door of the prince's bedroom.

"What's the matter?" asked a drowsy edroom.

"What's the matter?" asked a drowsy wast the matter? asked a drowsy voice.

"There's an earthquake; come, sir."
was the shouted reply.

"Then, why don't you send it away?"
"Won't you come outside, sir?"
"Outside? No, certainly not. I'm in bed. Go away."

The equerry, his div performed, followed the hurrying cannot dout into the open air, under the deep blue sky and tranquil stars. After an thour of this peaceful scene, alarm died away, and everyone had returned to the hotel to dress when the second shock came, driving them all out again into the garden.

The equerry's thoughts again at once apparent to the throne of Great Britain was, in a measure, in his special charge. How had he acquitted himself of his sacred stewardship? A twinge of conscience made leim feel uncomfortable as he sat out there in the still garden on an inverted watering port expecting the tall chimneys of the diplomat's house across the square to come toppling down over him. He had not aroused the prince at the second shock. So he got up, returned to the hotel, and, passing through the public rooms—His Royal Highness was on the ground floor, in a sort of annex, that projected into a private flower-planted court—reached the prince's door and knocked.

reached the prince's door and knocked.

There was no response. He knocked again. Still no answer. A third, louder than before—loud enough, in fact, to rouse all the seven sleepers. But still no answering voice. And then the horrid truth, sudden as was the earthquake shock, flashed into the wretched equerry's mind. Something was wrong. Had the prince perished? In an instant he had flung the door open and dashed across the anteroom. The curtains at the door of the bed-chamber were drawn close together. With a frenzied hand he seized them and drew them apart. As he did so, somefrenzied hand he seized them and drew them apart. As he did so, something — but whether an aerolite, a thunderbolt, or a falling beam he knew not — struck him full in the face. Strange lights danced before his eyes. His head swam, and in a momentary faintness he leaned against the door, But next mement a voice fell on his ear, grave and reproachful! "Look here, Clarke, I won't have any more of this, and if you don't shut up making that beastly row and let me go to sleep, RH shy the other boot at you."
