" But, Isaac," said the Pilgrim these sports, the arms and steed of the knight who is unhorsed are forteit to his victor? Mow, I may be unfortunate, and so lose what I cannot replace or repay."

The Jew looked somewhat astounded at this possibility; but collecting his courage, he replied hastily, "No-no-no-it is impossible-I will not think so. The blessing of our Father will be upon thee. Thy lance will be powerful as the rod of Moses."

So saying, he was turning his mule's head away, when the Palmer in his turn, took hold of his gaberdine. "Nay, but Isaac thou knowest not all the risk. The steed may will spare neither horse nor man. Besides, those of thy tribe give there must be paid for their use."

J. E. COLLINS,.....Editor. FREDERICTON, DECEMBER 4, 1879. SIR LEONARD TILLEY TO VISIT

FREDERICTON. It is indeed a great pleasure for us to contemplate that in a few days we are likely to have the Finance Minister of Canada pay us a visit and look in on our work-shops and factories. How long Sir Leonard is likely to remain we do not know, and how many or what manufactories he is likely to call at during his visit, would be just as difficult for us to say. It is more than likely, though, he will stay three or four days, during which time his spare moments will be few. There will be several people hovering around him to pour few, no doubt, to tell him of some imaginary grievance. Then there will be those who have not "laid eyes" on him since Canada made him her Finance Minister, and the Queen one of her trusty krights: and these will want to shake hands with him, and have the pleasure, if not indeed the honor, of talking with him, Sir Leonard will likely pay a call to the Gibson Leather Factory and perhaps to the Fredericton Leather Company's Establishment. He will look in, quite

IRELAND AND ITS GRIEVANCES.

WE were born on sea, we have been told, and consequently belong to every nation, tribe and tongue. Had we had our will, we should have preferred to have been born in some primitive locality where no other genius existed. We expressed our opinion a short time ago on the subject of Ireland's troubles, and the facts which have since been manifested only prove what we then said. Some in their simplicity wished to impress us with the idea that we didn't know anything about the country. We were impressed with the conviction that we knew more about Ireland than they did. They saw only one side of the picture; we had seen both sides.

We have read and heard of many means whereby the good people of Ireland are to be relieved of the tyranny and thraldom of ages: this last is the most agrarian and nonsensical of them all. Did we enter into a critical analysis of the hereditary right to property. either in Europe or America, it would be interesting to know what would be the claim of the present proprietors. Would they have any other than the right of possession? As we said before, we simply reject the mode adopted as too wild and extravagant. No rational man can ever approve of it, however he may love his country and desire a redress of its see how we would like to have the sam principles applied to ourselves: for what is equity in one country ought to be equity in another. But we may be told that the causes are not similar. We might as well be told that what is sauce for the goose is not sauce for the gander. Our impressions are, as satisfactorily redressed by act of Parlikely, on Messrs. McFarlane, Thompto revolution, did time, place and cirson and Anderson, whose foundry cumstances justify it. JEFF. DAVIS ONCE MORE.

We regret to have to announce tha the Jeff. Davis who figures in "that song" is not dead, as announced in a late number of the STAR. We have been twitted right and left with our mistake by critics of every grade and sex. Some of those who thought, it most "stupid" if asked if they had read Romeo and Juliet, would likely tell you "Well, yes, I read Romeo, but I intend starting at Juliet soon," and some others of them who could tell you that " Jeff " Davis had no "C" to his name, could not tell on but William the Conqueror was the polite name for the man in the mon But the larger number of the "critics" likely never heard of either of the Jeffs at all, and only heard some one else criticize it. For the benefit of this captious fraternity, therefore, let us state that " Jeff " Davis is not dead, but that Queen Anne is.

GOVERNOR CHANDLER.

We are quite pleased to be able to announce that a rumor published in the STAR a few days ago to the effect that he Lieut .- Governor was likely to retire at an early day, lacks confirmation Whatever may have been his Honor's intentions in regard to leaving, he has no notion now of vacating the Chair he has filled so satisfactorily to all with whom he has been concerned. The prospects are, therefore, that unless some events shut out by futurity's screen give rise to a charge of intention His Honor will continue to rule us to the full extent of his term; which is our wish, and that no doubt of all who k now His Honor.
