PAPYRUS CLUB

We clip the following from the Boston Globe of January 25th. When we received it, we were surprised to find it reproduced in the New York Herald. The Boston Globe has a very interesting article on the Papyrus Club, which is a very young and energetic organization. It is a club of young men, who are interested in the study of the Papyrus plant, and who are engaged in a very interesting and useful work.

At the business meeting the following officers were elected for the year: President, James Jeffrey; Secretary, Arthur May; Treasurer, E. Clarence; Executive Committee, James Jeffrey, William A. May, and Arthur May.

A note was taken on the London question, and the chief object of the meeting was to discuss the same.

ABOUT STANLEY. There is a well known story of Mr. E. Stanley. Now that Stanley has become famous, he must feel highly amused if he ever thinks of the days when, as a young man representing the New York Herald, he arrived in London and announced that he had found the young man calling himself Stanley.

At the meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, the young man calling himself Stanley stood up and announced that he had found Livingstone. No one would believe him. The royal geographical society gave no credence to his statement.

The West End club voted him an American impostor. When a meeting of the British association was held at Brighton, the young man calling himself Stanley stood up and announced that he had found Livingstone. No one would believe him.
