All this talk about western wheat flours being "pastry" flours, is just plain talk. Anyone, who knows anything about wheat, knows that western wheat flour cannot, will not and does not, make as good pastry as "BEAVER" FLOUR.

Any flour, which is said to be western wheat flour, and makes extra good pies and cake, will be found to be blended like "Beaver" Flour—whether it is sold as such or not.

A blended flour like "BEAVER" FLOUR is the only one that is equally good for bread and pastry. You will understand WHY.

Manitoba wheat has what the bakers call strength. It makes a big loaf of bread; but the bread is spongy or full of holes and lacks flavor.

Ontario wheat, blended with spring wheat, makes the ideal bread and pastry flour. By combining the two in just the right proportions, we have "Beaver" Flour—a flour that makes the real home-made bread and delicious light pastry.

In cities such as Toronto, where bakers have tried a blended flour, it was found that although a smaller appearing loaf was the result, the people refused the Manitoba flour bread in favor of it—and there is now no other flour used.

R. G. ASH & CO., St. John's, Sole Agents in Nfld., will be pleased to quote prices.

A MYSTERIOUS QUEST.

CHAPTER VII.

A Great Day at Police Headquarters.

His success was but partial. The rooms above were occupied but only by lodgers, who knew nothing more of the signorina's departure than that it had taken place early in the morning. They had been told she was ill, and from her appearance had thought she was dying or dead, but when the time came, as they supposed, for a funeral, behold! a storage wagon drove up and took away her furniture, and afterward to their unbounded surprise, there came a carriage from the livery stable, into which not only the strange Portuguese woman stepped, but the signorina herself alive and well and seemingly in excellent health, if not spirits. They could not understand it and could get no explanation from

Tells Others His Secret

Wants them to know how he was cured of itching, protruding piles by DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT. Doctors usually recommend the knife as the only cure for piles. They overlook the risk, the expense and the suffering of mind and body entailed in a surgical operation. Dr. Chase's Ointment will bring relief quickly and will cure thoroughly if you will persist. Mr. A. Honington, 52 Bronson Place, Montreal, Que., writes: "I cannot help praising Dr. Chase's Ointment as I suffered many years with itching and protruding piles, and was cured by this ointment. I became tired of the efforts of the best specialists to cure me, and hearing of Dr. Chase's Ointment just as I had of hundreds of other medicines began its use. But oh, great joy, at the very start the sharp pains left me and I was gradually cured. I hope that every sufferer will follow my example with the same success." Every form of piles or hemorrhoids is cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment. 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

any one, as the house was without a landlady and none of the other lodgers were any better informed than themselves.

Mr. Degraw suggested that perhaps the girl who attended the front door might be able to tell something, but they assured him to the contrary, explaining that she was not only stone deaf but dumb, and that she only went to the door when sent by some one. It was therefore evident that he was but wasting time in lingering about this house, and once convinced of this he made haste to depart.

But when in the street, a sense of his helplessness came over him. An artist unaccustomed to the practical side of life he knew nothing of the expedients which would have suggested themselves to other men, and after a few more fruitless inquiries among the neighbors, he turned back to the studio, a disappointed and disconsolate man. The adorable young singer was gone, and with her had fled the first real dream of love that had ever disturbed the even tenor of his hitherto careless existence.

He was brooding upon his adventure and comforting himself with the thought that the signorina had at least gone away of her own free will and without the companionship of Montelli, when a friend came in. It was not a welcome interruption, but before many minutes had passed, he determined to make use of it by submitting his case to this man of the world, and learning from him how he could hope to renew an acquaintance which had been broken off in this sudden and unceremonious fashion. Not that he meant to mention names or give any of the particulars so dear to his heart, for whether she was the persecuted being he thought her, in the tolls and subject to the dominions of the traitorous Portuguese and the abominable Montelli, or whether she was a simple and capricious child, only anxious for a change and thinking nothing of him and his feelings, he felt that she was "equally sacred to him and not to be discussed except with one who knew her and esteemed her as much as he did himself. It was, therefore, with most aggravating vagueness that he spoke: a vagueness which, indeed, told its own tale and caused the friend he had chosen to consult to take on a bantering tone, indescribably offensive to the sensitive Degraw. But he did not choose to reveal his feelings and expressed himself as duly gratified when his friend suggested first, an advertisement in the Herald, and secondly, an appeal to the police; an advertisement was, in this instance, so likely to receive a response, and it was invariably so agreeable to consult the police on a personal matter. But when, after more bantering and one or more sarcastic remarks, his friend left, he asked himself what other advice he could have expected and wondered he had not thought of the police himself. For if, as he most feared, the young girl had been lured away by false representations, where else could he look for more effective help both in finding her and in securing for her the safety her defenceless and friendless position demanded. Yet he recoiled, as most sensitive natures would, from carrying her name into quarters associated so intimately with crime, and might, indeed, have abandoned the whole matter rather than run the risk of doing her further harm, if he had not remembered that an old friend of his, by the name of Byrd, had, by force of circumstances, unnecessary to mention here, been

PARALYZED COW CURED

By Douglas' Egyptian Liniment

Here is a remarkable case that came up on the farm of Mr. D. E. Perry, Violet, Ont., as described by himself: "One of my cows was so badly paralyzed in the back and hind legs that she could not walk. I tried nearly every remedy that I could hear of but none of them proved to be any good. My neighbors told me there was no use doing anything more for her but I determined to give Douglas' Egyptian Liniment a trial for luck. It worked wonders, for after using two bottles the cow was completely cured." Egyptian Liniment seems almost to work magic in all kinds of stiffness, soreness, sprains, rheumatism and similar troubles of man and beast, as well as on cuts, burns, scalds, sores, barber's itch and other skin troubles. If you have a bottle of Egyptian Liniment on hand you are prepared to deal quickly and effectively with a good share of the troubles that come up in the home or in the stable. 70 cts. per bottle. of a young girl—why do you start at that?"

The detective, who certainly had started, recovered himself instantly. "Did I start?" he asked, with an assumption of carelessness. "Go on, Degraw. You wish to learn the fate of a young girl, you say—"

"Yes," assented the artist; "a young girl whom I have seen but once, but who, in that one interview, awakened in me so lively an interest that I can never rest till I have gathered some knowledge of her present whereabouts. Her name may not be unknown to you. It is Selina Valdi, or rather," he corrected himself almost in the same way in which she had done, "that is the name by which she is known at present. Her real name I am not acquainted with. She began to tell me and got as far as saying 'Jenny' and there she stopped."

Mr. Byrd, whose interest seemed to have fallen off with the first explanation, recovered his eagerness at the last.

"Jenny," he repeated, "Jenny. What a pity you did not hear the last name! And she has disappeared! Tell me the whole story; I am anxious to hear it."

Whereupon Mr. Degraw related his late adventure, while Byrd listened eagerly, and when all was finished, looked the more serious of the two.

"I wish she had told you her whole name," he repeated. "What a remarkable adventure!"

"But the signorina! What do you suppose has become of her?"

"That we must find out. Not that I should consider it in our province to do so, if—"

"If what, Byrd?"

But the detective did not answer; he was looking at Degraw very thoughtfully.

"You seem to be more interested," said he, "in this young girl than men usually are after a single interview."

"Single interviews are not often of such a nature," returned Degraw. "Besides, there was something about her so touching that it would have taken a harder heart than mine to resist so much innocence and beauty."

"I can believe it," assented the other. Then, with a sort of precipitancy, he exclaimed: "Dark eyes, you say, dark hair inclined to curl and a beautiful figure. Mr. Degraw I am sorry to inform you that we have just received notice that a person answering to this description has been found."

"Where, where?"

"In a distant alley-way, lying on the ground—"

"Dead?"

"It is not she; I know it is not she. I cannot, will not have it the signorina."

"I hope you are right; I sincerely hope you are right; but she had a packet by her side, and in that packet was a handkerchief, and on that handkerchief a name was written, and that name is—"

"Jenny?"

"Jenny Rogers."

"But she called herself Valdi, Selina Valdi; has been known as Selina Valdi for years. Whatever her original name might be, she would have 'Valdi' and only 'Valdi' in her kerchief."
