At first the Institution will be simply a "Home of Refuge" for girls, a sort of Ecclesiastical Boarding House. They will have all the advantages and dation at once for some three or four of these. Other objects which Siste Mary Clare had in view were, a laun dry, a hospital, a school, etc., etc. Al these we hope will be realized a years roll on. In the meantime we launch the "Home" to-day, on small scale and with a humble begin or coincidence, that when the first "Home or Refuge" was established here by the late Fr. Richard O'Donel he inaugurated it under the title and patronage of the Sainted Virgin of Assisi—the Companion of St. Francisco.

At the opening of the above Institution on Monday, Sept. 29th, His Grace Archbishop Howley spoke part ting here to-day, though very smal in its beginning, is I am sure, destined to have a great and far-reaching cffect on the future welfare of the Dio Catholic Church in Newfoundland.

St. Clare's Home and House of Mercy This Institution is intended principally as a Home of Refuge and protection for young women, especially for those who come from Outports to the city. There will also be accommodation for a few elderly ladies wh may prefer the quiet and religious at mosphere of an Institution, presided over by Sisters of Mercy, and posses-sing all the refinements and comforts of home, while permeated with an atmosphere of peace and holiness.

The work that is to be accomplished by this Institution is one of the definof Mercy; and is especially prescribed in the Book of their Rules and Con-the Venerable Bishop Fleming introduced the Sisters of Mercy into Newfoundland in 1842. This was only founded by the Saintly Mother Mc-Cauly, in Dublin, in 1830, and in that short space of time so popular had the Order become and so well was it adapted to meet the wants of the time that already the number of the Nuns of the Order in England and Ireland, had increased to 250; and there were twelve houses in Ireland and three in England. Just about nine years before this time Bishop Fleming had established the Nuns of the Presentation Order in Newfoundland, in 1833. The
