"VISIONS OF THE PAST."

The past, as it were, rises before me like a dream. Again we are in the great struggle for national life. We hear the sound of preparation—the music of the boisterous drums, the silver voices of the bugles. We see thousands of assemblages, and hear the appeals of orators, we see the pale faces of women, and the flushed faces of men; and in those assemblages we see all the dead whose dust we have covered with flowers. We lose sight of them no more. We are with them when they enlist in the great army of freedom. We see them part with those they love. Some are walking for the last time in quiet, woody places with the young lady they adore. We hear the whisperings and the sweet vows of eternal love as they lingeringly part forever. Others are bending over cradles kissing babies that are asleep. Some are receiving the blessings of aged men. Some are parting with mothers who hold them and press them to their hearts again and again, and say nothing; and some are talking with wives and endeavoring, with brave words spoken in the old tones, to drive away the awful fear. We see the wife with the babe in her arms and the sweetheart standing in the door—standing in the sunlight sobbing. At the turn of the road a hand waves—she answers by holding high in her loving hands the child, she throws out a kiss, he is gone, and forever.

We see them all as they march proudly away under the flowing flags, keeping time to the wild, grand music of the band—marching down the streets of the great cities—through the towns and across the prairies—down to the fields of glory to do and die for the eternal right. We go with them and all. We are by their side on all the gory fields, on all the weary marches, in all the hospitals of pain. We stand guard with them in the wild storm and under the quiet stars. We are with them in the ravines running with blood—in the furrows of old fields. We are with them one and all. We are by hosts, unable to move, wild with thirst, the life ebbing slowly away among withered leaves. We see them pierced by balls and torn with shells in the trenches of forts, and in the whirlwinds of the charge, where men became iron with nerves of steel. We are with them through all their suffering, but human speech can never tell what they endured. We are home when the news comes that they are dead. We see the fair young sweetheart in the shadow of her sorrow. We see the silvered head of the old man bowed with the last grief. The past rises before us. We hear the roar and shriek of the bursting shell. The broken fetters fall.

These heroes died. We look; instead of slaves we see men, women and children, and we see homes, and firesides, schoolhouses and books, and where all was want and crime, cruelty and fear, we see the faces of the free.

These heroes are dead. They died for liberty—they died for us. They are at rest. They sleep in the land they made free, under the flag they rendered stainless, under the solemn pines, the sad hemlocks, the tearful willows, the embracing rivers. They sleep beneath the shadows of the clouds, careless alike of sunshine or storm, each in the windowless palace of rest.

Earth may run red with other wars—they are at peace. In the midst of battle, in the roar of conflict, they found the serenity of death. Lover thy gentle voice is hushed, Thy warm true heart is stilled, On thy pale and peaceful face Is resting death's cold chill; Thy hands are clasped upon thy breast, I've kissed thy lovely brow, In my aching heart I know I have no lover now.

There is a word, of grief the sounding token; There is a word bejeweled with bright tears, The saddest word fond lips have ever spoken; A little word that breaks the chain of years, Its utterance must ever bring emotion, The memories its crystals cannot die. 'Tis known in every land, on every ocean— 'Tis called "Good Bye."

Quit! Back-Soreness Goes!

Torturous Lumbago Cured by "Nerviline"

This Wonderful Curative Liniment Has Almost Magical Powers.

You can compare a congestive pain to a little fire. When congestion smoulders, pain comes and goes. Congestion grows into inflammation, but pain, now intense, grows excruciating and stays, too. There is an absolute antidote of pain—it is Nerviline.

New, to you, perhaps is Nerviline, but known well in many lands as the most penetrating and pain-subduing remedy ever discovered. Not oily or ill-smelling, but pleasant—it rubs on. Not temporary action, but permanent in its control of pain.

Not an ache or a pain anywhere that it cannot reach. No soreness or strain that it has not the power to relieve.

Nerviline is the only remedy in the world old under guarantees—if it does not relieve you, you get your money back. Proof enough that Nerviline is a remedy that will fulfill absolutely every requirement of a pain-reliever, both for internal and external use.

Backache it cures like magic. For rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, stiffness, sprains or strains, it is the only thing. Large bottle, 50 cents; trial size, 25 cents; at druggists.

C. L. B. Parade.

The Church Lads' Brigade held their second Church parade for the season yesterday afternoon, attending Divine Service at the Cathedral. The service was conducted by Rev. J. Brinton, and the preacher was Rev. Mr. Adams who delivered a forceful address. During the service the battalion band rendered a number of hymns.

Owing to the downpour of rain the March through the city was abandoned and the Brigade returned to their armoury via Long's Hill. On arrival at the armoury the Lieut.-Col. presented Capt. R. Wood, of C. Company, Lt. F. Rendell of F. Company and Lt. R. Ash, B. Company with their commissions which they recently received. The parade was largely attended despite the unfavourable weather, upwards of 300 taking part including many of the Old Comrades.

Craft in Peril.

While beating out the harbour yesterday a Southern Shore craft mis-stayed and went in near the rocks by the South Head of the Narrows. There was an unusually heavy sea running at the time and the little craft and her crew were in imminent danger, as gradually she was being dragged towards the shore. A pilot boat went to the assistance of the craft and towed her clear of danger. The craft sustained very little damage and proceeded on her voyage.

Narrow Escape From Death.

MAN FALLS BETWEEN SHIP AND PIER.

James Hollihan, aged 23 years, a laborer of Battery Road, had a close call from losing his life on Saturday evening. It was about seven o'clock and the s.s. Durango, which had just arrived from Halifax, was moving in slowly to berth at the Furness Withy Co's pier. Hollihan, who was standing on the wharf, seemed anxious to be one of the first to get aboard, and as soon as the ship came within a yard of the pier he stepped towards the rail of the ship. The stride proved too much for him, however, and he fell between the ship and the pier into the water. It was feared that he struck in his descent, but when he arose to the surface it was observed that Hollihan had not struck anything. He was very much alive. An improvised life-belt in the shape of a large rope with a loop at one end of it, was thrown by workmen from the wharf to Hollihan who grasped it and was lifted safely to the pier. While waiting for the rescue line Hollihan, who was unable to swim, managed to cling firmly to the huge cross bars which are protectors for the front of the wharf and which together with the fact that the Durango did not fasten her moorings right away were doubtless responsible for saving Hollihan's life. He had a narrow escape, though he was none the worse for his immersion a few hours afterwards.
