

When Choosing the Material for a washable Frock for the growing child—

MOTHER naturally thinks of the possibilities of the fabric shrinking in the wash. It is therefore a relief to her to know that the fabric will not shrink or lose its charm if Lux is used for its cleansing.

Durability, charm of colour, quality of texture, the freshness of whiteness—these are preserved to all good fabrics washed with Lux. A packet of Lux—a bowl of warm water—and dainty hands can clean delicate fabrics in a delightfully easy manner.

The beautiful pure Lux flakes are whisked into a creamy lather in an instant. Gently squeeze this cleansing foam through and through the soiled fabric—then rinse in clean water and hang to dry. Lux cannot harm a silken thread. It takes the dirt from the clothes.

Packets (two sizes) may be obtained everywhere.

SHALL SHE GIVE UP HER JOB?

"I have been worrying quite a bit lately," writes a Letter-friend, "over an affair which concerns me deeply. As it has to do with my occupation, I am not satisfied with my present trade. It is so exacting of my time that I can't have any time for amusements, and it is detrimental to my nature. There are other things I'd much rather do, but they would not be quite so remunerative. I often think I'd rather have money and take up the work I enjoy more."

Some people might think that I am a fool to give up a job for something with less pay in it as far as money is concerned, and I wouldn't say that myself. But one should consider their own likes and dislikes in matters of that sort. Don't think so, or do you, too, think I am a fool?"

My Letter-friend knew me very well, and she would not ask that question.

The Biggest Difference in Life.

For one of the prime tenets of my creed one of the few that have not been modified as I have grown older, has always been that whether one likes one's work or not makes the biggest difference in the sum of one's happiness of any factor in one's life.

Do I think she is a fool actually to be willing to take a little less money in order to get the chance to do work she will enjoy doing? No, I think she shows a rare wisdom.

Which do we spend most of our waking time—at earning our dollars or spending them?

If it were the other way around—if we employed a quarter of our waking time making our living and three-quarters of it spending our money, we might be willing to put up with a disagreeable job for that small fraction of our time for the sake of more money.

Help Them Find Themselves.

But with most of us work is life, and if we are unhappy in our work it is almost impossible to be happy in our lives.

There is no bigger thing parents can do for their children than try to help them find themselves in a line of work for which they have some natural aptitude.

There is, to my mind, no more valuable philanthropy than the vocational bureau which are springing up to help young people, and older people, too, in this self-finding process.

And the value is not only to the individual but to the community, for the man who likes his work will certainly produce far more than the man who hates it.

And She May Make More.

Of course I do not know what the opportunity is in the line of work to which my Letter-friend thinks of shifting. But if there is any outlook at all, I would not be surprised if the ultimate outcome of a change such as she contemplates, would be financial success for her as well as greater happiness.

There is a little poem along this line which I may have quoted to you before but it is worth quoting again, and in reading it please remember that "paint or sing or carve" are used simply as symbols of all work.

"Work for the work's sake—

Paint or sing or carve,

The thing thou lovest

Though the body starve.

Who works for glory

Misses off the goal.

Who works for money coins his very soul.

Work for the work's sake, then, and it may be

That these things shall be added unto thee."

A Klondyke Romance.

Fortune plays queer pranks at times.

Living in a hovel near Lake Bennett, Alaska, is a beautiful Indian woman, who, at one time, wore belts and necklaces of solid gold. She recalls with pride the floor of her room was covered with big nuggets.

She is Kate Carmack, wife of George Carmack, one of the first men to find gold in the Klondike. Once worth millions, she is now penniless.

The story goes that George Carmack, who had been a rancher in California, was on a fishing trip, accompanied by Kate, "Skookim Jim," and "Tahish Charlie."

One day Kate, sister of "Skookim Jim," went down to the creek for water. When she scooped up the water she was surprised to find at the bottom of the pan a number of big nuggets. She ran back to Carmack to show him the gold, and the rancher and his two "pals" rushed to the creek and found the heaped-up treasure.

Another story says that Carmack, with his companions, had been fishing, and that, standing beside an old birch-tree, he noticed a sprinkling of gold on the projecting bed-rock.

A pay streak fully a hundred feet wide and four feet deep yielded rich results—sometimes as much as a hundred dollars to a pan. The fortune he had dreamed of materialized far beyond his expectations, says Charlotte Cameron in "A Cheechako in Alaska and Yukon."

Carmack married Kate, took her to Seattle, and stayed at an hotel. Kate could not find her way to her room, so she introduced the way of the forest to the city, and "blazed the trail" by cutting notches in the banisters of the hotel staircase!

The former rancher divorced his Indian wife. He would have taken care of her, but solicitors got hold of her and made claims upon Carmack, which so aroused his anger that he withdrew and gave her nothing.

Shy of Proof.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

Senator Knox was once compelled by financial affairs to visit a boom town in the West.

In the evening, as he sat in the office of the corrugated iron hotel trying to digest a dinner of salt pork and beans, the landlord thrust a three-cent cigar into his hand and said:

"I certainly am proud of Boomville! Would you believe it, sir, that two years ago there wasn't no town here at all?"

"Humph," said Senator Knox. "And what makes you think there is one here now?"

Husband and Wife Are Both Satisfied.

MRS. STEPHENSON FEELS IT HER DUTY TO RECOMMEND DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Victoria Lady who suffered from Pains in the Back tells of the Relief she Sought and Found.

Victoria, B.C., Jan. 19th.—(Spec.) (M.)—"Both my husband and myself have obtained great relief through using Dodd's Kidney Pills."

So says Mrs. M. Stephenson who lives at 1919 1/2 Belmont Ave., this city. "For two years on and off," she continues, "I have taken them for pains in the back and found great relief. I've taken them, too, with hot lemonade for a cold and got splendid results. I feel it my duty to tell what a splendid remedy Dodd's Kidney Pills are. I always recommend them to my friends."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are purely and simply a Kidney Remedy. They act directly on the Kidneys, strengthening them and putting them in condition to do their full work of straining the impurities out of the blood. Dodd's Kidney Pills have been in use in Canada for more than thirty years. They demonstrated their worth in the most serious forms of Kidney Disease, such as rheumatism, dropsy and diabetes. They have also done splendid work in strengthening sick Kidneys to ward off serious diseases.

Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills are not the best Kidney Remedy.

An Antidote for the Crime Wave.

Louis Lennen of Paterson, N.J., has accidentally discovered an antidote for New Jersey's crime wave.

"Put on two pairs of trousers," is his formula.

A chill wind was blowing when Lennen started for a doctor for his sick wife.

"Two pairs of trousers will not come amiss," he said to himself.

In front of the public library two highwaymen urged him, with revolvers drawn, to throw up his hands. "Search me!" said Lennen.

The robbers left him, provoked after finding nothing in his outside trousers. They looked no farther for—well, two pairs are a bit unusual.

Carrying a fat bank roll in his "innards," Lennen stopped incidentally at the police station en route to the doctor's.

John Smith's House.

(From World Wide.)

The meeting was interrupted by the entrance of one who made his way to the platform and whispered excitedly to the chairman.

"Is Mr. Smith in the audience?" broke forth the presiding officer. "I am informed that his house is afire."

Forty men sprang to their feet. "It is the house of Mr. John Smith," added the chairman.

"Thank goodness," fervently exclaimed one man, resuming his seat.

Lives Three Days Beside Dead Husband

The latest tragedy of poverty which has shocked Paris is that of a retired clerk aged 62 years, who for years has lived with his half-witted wife on his small savings, in a two-roomed apartment on a shabby-genteel street, the Rue Saint-Medard.

The increased cost of living brought them gradually but fatally nearer starvation. The winter cold added to their suffering. They could afford no fire, and for weeks Petticoat was seen trudging the streets in a hopeless search for work. Finally, on New Year's Eve, the unhappy husband was overcome by the misery of his lot. Before the uncomprehending eyes of his wife, who sat mumbling in her chair, he fastened a rope to a hook in the ceiling and hanged himself.

For three days the demented woman lived alone in the room with the dead man. It was only after that time that a sudden gleam of sanity brought home to her the meaning of the body dangling at her side, and she rushed screaming from the house. Neighbors and police returned with her to find the ghastly truth. The woman has been removed to an asylum, and her husband will be buried in a pauper's grave.

Such Absent-Mindedness.

Recently a well-dressed woman entered one of the large department stores in Pittsburgh. In fact, she was dressed in the height of fashion—that is, to all appearances, for she wore a noble fur turban, an expensive fur coat, with handbags to match. A short while in the store convinced her that her fur garments were causing her no little discomfort, so she threw open her coat. Lo and behold she had failed to put on a dress!

There she stood, coat open, staring in silk bloomers. A clerk called her attention to the fact, and the customer immediately proceeded to swoon. She explained that in her rush to do her shopping she had overlooked the fact that she had not put on a dress.
