Dpening of the Quebec Legislature. Opening of the Quebec Legislature.

The Quebec Legislature was opened on Thursday, when the Lieut.-Governor delivered the opening speech. After referring in complimentary terms to their activity in the previous session, and to the evidences of prosperity of the Province, as shown in various ways, he alimed to the large emigration of French Canadians from the Province. It was desirable totty and induce these to return to their homes, and for this purpose he recommended that the municipalities should provide as much work as possible in imtheir homes, and for this purpose he recommended that the municipalities should provide as much work as possible in improving highways, &c. The liberat policy of the Government in relation to the construction of railways will be continued; also the same immirration policy, which has been so successful in former years.
A new election law is promised, also measures relating to the Judicature and Public Instruction. The Federal Government having assumed the surplus debt for which, under the Constitution, the Province was liable, the difficulties between Ontario and Quebec on this point no longer exist. This act of legislation places at the disposal of the Province additional resources, which should be of great use to the Provinces. Notwithstanding several unforseen expenses, the balance remaining in the hands of the Treasurer on the first of July last was still more considerable than in the previous year.

was still more considerable than in the previous year.

Almost Tragic.—Arthur Canes, one of the hands employed in the shoe factory, at Brampton has been paying lis addresses to Miss Burnett, one of the teachers in that place, and which was not altogether agreeable to the family. On Monday morning her brother, Henry Burnett, saw Charles Canes at the school door speaking to his sister, and said, "Charlie, what are you doing here?" The latter replied "It's none of your business," and immediately struck at Burnett which the latter guarded off with his arm. A souffle ensued, which was ended by a neighbor, Mrs. Franks. Burnett had only gone about one hundred paces when he saw another cutter approaching the school, and thinking there was something in the wind, he returned and told Canes that unless he left he would let him have it, or something to that effect. Mrs. Franks approached Burnett and asked him to go away. While in this position Canes approached Burnett and unseen, fired a revolver at his head. He were a black wide-awake hat, and the ball passed through the rim and through the side near the crown and out at the crown, grazing his head so as to bring the blood down his face. Burnett observed Canes raising his arm a second time, when he selzed the revolver by the muzzle, and grappling with him threw him. Canes eventually gave up the revolver. It was cooked a second time. Canes was apprehended and committed for trial. It was rumored that an elopement was intended.
