The unfortunate person was shoved a short distance, the train being stopped as quickly as possible. He died in Woodstock this morning, his body having been badly mangled. His name has not yet been discovered, although it is known he was uneral of the Late F. F. Davis.

Funeral of the Late F. F. Davis.

The remains of the late Rev. Fred. F. Davis, son of Judge Davis, were taken to Sarnia yesterday by the G. T. R. for interment there. The funeral service was held in the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Rev. W. Hill officiating, assisted by a full choir, in the presence of a large congregation. Beautiful floral offerings covered the casket. Following were the pall-bearers: Rev. R. Hicks, Mossrs. Harrison and Armstrong, of Thorndale, and Messrs. A. B. Cox, C. Shanley and M. V. Bucke, of this city.

Ricked by a Horse.

Albert Smith, hostler at the Western Hotel, was engaged in cleaning out the stables last evening about 5 o'clock, when a spirited horse in the stall where he was working suddenly kicked him, knocking him down. While in this position the animal again kicked him several times in the head. Dr. Mitchell was soon on the spot and found that Smith had sustained fractures in the collar bone and lower jaw, while a bad scalp wound had been inflicted in the back of the head. The wounds are not necessarily fatal but sufficiently serious to keep him confined for some time. His suffering was intense.

The maid of honor, Miss Sadie Postle, sister of the bride, wore pale blue silk with ostrich trimmings and garniture of pink roses. Mr. Harry Brooks, of London, performed the office of best man. The wedding was a quiet one, attended only by the relatives and a few intimate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Lackte left the same evening for an extended wedding tour through Canada before going to Winnipeg, their future home."

A Labor Union's Label.

The question of the right of a labor union to protect against imitation the distinctive mark it may put on union-made goods came up in the case of Wm. V. Todd vs. Brener Bros. before Justice Robertson at Toronto Tuesday. All the parties are residents of this city. Mr. Todd's cigar manufactory is a union shop; Messrs Brener's is not. Mr. Todd has been putting the well-known union blue label on the goods he makes, and at the request of some of his known union blue label on the goods he makes, and at the request of some of his customers Messrs. Brener procured from the States imitations of the union label and was putting them upon his boxes. The present action is to stop this and protect the union label from counterfeit. Mr. Osler, for the plaintiff, contended that by the fictitious labels inferior goods made by inferior workmen were palmed off upon the public as the product of the members of the union. Mr. G. C. Gibbons, Q.C., of this city, counsel for the defense, admitted that the foreign labels were made to imitate the union labels, but contended that the International Cigarmakers' Union was not an incorporated

"Good Old Times."

The Toronto Mail devotes almost a column of spece to an interesting criticism

The Toronto Mail devotes almost a column of space to an interesting criticism of "Good Old Times," which will be presented at the Grand Opera House on Monday evening next. Among other things it says: "All those who went to the Grand expecting to witness a good play from the hands of such justly celebrated dramatists as Messrs. Wilson Barrett and Hall Caine, met with an ample reward for their trouble. "Good Old Times" is one of the best dramas we have had the pleasure of seeing in this city for a very long time. The plot is a good one, the interest is uncommonly well maintained. Some of the situations were intensely—even painfully—realistic, and the acting is of an unusually high order all though. The play is mounted in the latest and most approved manner known to the stage; the scenery is all carried by the management, and is very handsome, while the numerous and intricate mechanical arrangements all went last night.

and the interest is eleverly worked up in a way that made the audience watch with an auxious and intense feeling the succession of startling episodes as they were being rapidly developed. In fact, so closely did the onlookers enter into the spirit of the situation that when the officers declared John Langley to be free, many people rose to their feet and added to the applause by hearty cheering, producing for a few minutes a scene of wild excitement. Again was the curtain rung up, and the principal performers received an ovation. There are three scenes in the third act, all of them noticeable, but one of them (the interior of the cave with a sunlight effect) being especially so. Again when the curtain fell the gratification of the audience was expressed in fresh outbursts of approval, and a single member of the company had to face the footlights. The electrical effects shown in the fourth act, where fireflies are seen flitting about in the bush, flies are seen flitting about in the bush, were novel and striking, and won a hearty tribute of admiration."
