feverish anxiety to learn the result of the consultation, at which Dr. Ross, of Montreal, was to be present.

Many have maintained all along and up to this afternoon believed that Sir John would pull through. Rev. Father McWilliams, of Railton, an old friend of the Premier's, said to your correspondent at 4 o'clock, in reply to an assurance that death was inevitable: "I yet cling to the belief that he will not die. Perhaps a wish is father to the thought, but still I think he will recover."

Just as the hour arrived for the meeting of the House the last hopes of those mem bers who have thought that the case was not hopeless were dashed by the arrival of the following bulletin:

At our consultation to-day we find Sir John Macdonald altogether in a somewhat alarming state. His strength, which has gradually failed him during the past week, shows a marked decline since yesterday. He shows still a slight flickering of consciousness. Respiration, 38; pulse, 120; more feeble and irregular than heretofore. His hours of life are steadily waning.

found it impossible to make out an argument against it. The member for Brant proceeded to make a vigorous appeal for the adoption of the principle. If the House voted down the bill, he declared it would be voting to continue an undue advantage in voting to some people over others because of their property. The opposition to the bill was based on the old Tory idea that certain classes should make laws and rule the country. The bill of Mr. Edgar provided that those should vote who had a stake in the country, who lived in the country, who had to obey its laws and pay its taxes.

stake in the country, who lived in the country, who had to obey its laws and pay its taxes.

Col. F. C. Denison talked sound old Tory doctrine about the superior rights of the man with property over the man with a carpet bag. Dr. Landerkin spoke in support of the doctrine that it should not be land but men who vote. Mr. Davin quoted John Bright against the abolition of a property qualification for voting.

Mr. Choquette, who addressed the House in French, pointed out that constituencies on the line of the Intercolonial Railway were swamped by employes of that road who were placed on the lists in several districts and carried along the road to vote in all of them for Government candidates on election day. He spoke in support of the principle of the measure.

Dr. Sproule opposed the change as being for the benefit of wage-carners only and opposed to the interest of men who had a large stake in the country.

Col. Amyot condemned former speakers for dragging Provincial questions into this debate, and took up the question of the Intercolonial Railway, which he characterized as an engine of corruption.

Mr. Edgar, in reply, remarked that with every desire to give full weight to the argunents of honorable members who had opposed the bill, he must say that he did not think much light had been thrown upon the subject since the six months' hoist had been moved by the Minister of Justice, and in moving that hoist the Minister did not show his accustomed breadth of argument and his skill in mastering facts.

The House divided on the amendment giving the bill the six months' hoist, with the following result: 109 yeas and 77 nays. Messrs. Monet, Savard and Vallancourt went with the Government in this vote. Mr. Hyman in this vote paired in favor of the measure with Mr. Prior.

The supplementary estimates were laid on the table. The House adjourned at 11:15 o'clock.
