JENNIE JUNE'S FORTUNE.

New York, Jan. 30.—It was learned today that the late Mrs. Jennie June Croly, the leader of clubwomen, left the snug little fortune of $35,000 to her three children, although some time before her death she accepted the in-ome from a fund raised by Sorosis to keep her from want. Mrs. Vida Croly Sidney, a daughter who has come over from London to share in the estate, admited today that Mrs. Croly's income at the time

"My husband had been coughing for years and people frankly toid me that he would go into consumption," writes Mrs. John Shireman, of No. 265 25th Place, Chicago, Ill. "He had such terrible coughing spells we not only grew much alarmed but looked for the bursting of a bloodvessel or a hemorrhage at most any time. After three days' coughing he was too weak to cross the room. The doctor did him no good. I stated the case to a druggist, who handed me a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. My husbands recovery was remarkable. In three days after he began using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery he was up and around, and in two more days he went to work. Two bottles cured him."

+0+0+0+000+0+0+0+ "If we were fighting for that fellow instead of young Lester, I'd just go to bed at once, and order my-self not to be called till after the poll." The practical man, young as he was, and new to the work, found his labor and new to the work, found his labor congenial—far, more congenial than he had found Sophocles and Newton. Ho was the only man on the blue side who could fight the invader with his own peculiar weapons on equal terms. He canvassed indefatigably, and not in too scrupulous a manner; he spoke often and well; and though, as an orator, he and well; and though, as an orator, he was rather apt to talk over the heads of his audience, he thereby gained no little reputation for himself. A mob is always rather flattered by having addressed to it what it does not quite understand. And then, too, he had the advantage over Prescott of being well up in all local allusions; and he had the prestige of having not only been born in all local allusions; and he had the prestige of having not only been born and bred in the place, but of having become an honor to it besides—a prestige that he and White worked to the uttermost. Perhaps, after all, the cry of "Lester for ever!" was only less loud because for the name of "Lester" was so ofter substituted that of "Warden."

Madam Clare was not slow to see how things were going, and she became not a little jealous. But she made him a welcome visitor at Earl's Dene whenever he had occasion to call there, and treated him as his merits and services deserved. Miss Raymond, too, who had deserved. Miss Raymond, too, who had caught the election fever in its most intense form—so much so as to become sometimes quite angry with her candisometimes quite angry with her candidate for not coming out so strongly as he ought—came to treat Warden as the hero of the hour; indeed, she heard his praises sung by all around her so often and so loudly that, being a very different sort of young lady from what Miss Clare had been, she quite got rid of the impression that he had somehow made upon her at their first meeting. It was true that he could not ride across countrue that he could not ride across country: but then he could talk, and even with more enthusiastic amazons than Alice Raymond the tongue of silver out-weighs the best hand that ever lay on weighs the best hand that ever lay on bridle, when its owner knows how to use it discreetly. As for Marie, she grew ten times more proud of him than ever, and took such warm though ignorant in-verest in all he did, that he would have been more than man had he not felt the eld chain renew itself in spite of everychain renew itself in spite of everything.

And then, too, in those exciting, harassing weeks, he needed rest sometimes, more especially as the life he was now leading was not well calculated to restore his nervous tone. And where should he find rest? At home? His father now talked nothing but politics, and Mr. Brown, of whom he had to see quite enough during the day, had now become a more frequent evening visitor than ever. At Earl's Dene? Nothing but politics there also; and besides, when he went there he had to exert himself and to sustain his reputation. Where, in fact, should he find rest but where he ought to find it—that is to say, with Marie?

Nor was he the only visitor at Mon-sieur Lefort's. He a nerally confined himself to calling there in the evening; but when he did change to go there in the daytime, he more han once found Hugh Lester neglecting his interest for a while to hear Mademoselle Angelique a while to hear madeline sense angenque sing.

This sounds but a slight matter, nor did anyone concerned see any harm in it. To Marie it would have seemed the most natural thing possible had all the county crowded into the little room to hear the music that she held to be the most beautiful in the world; and, girl as she was, she was not che of those who cannot see two people together without at once leaping to extreme con-clusions. Monsieur Lefort did not trou-ble his head about it—he had other things clusions. Monsieur Lefort did not trouble his head about it—he had other things to think about it—he had other things to think about than such nonsense. Warden could not have seen any danger in it, or he would not rather have encouraged these visits of Lester's than otherwise, with a view to getting his candidate out of the way while he worked to better purpose without him. Lester, one may assume, did not; nor Angelique, one may hope, when one remembers the existence of Felix. What Madam Clare would have thought about it is another thing; but, fortunately for her repose of mind, her nephew did not include his visits to No. 23 in his daily journal of the progress of his canvass. He always had plenty to tell her without alluding to such a trifle.

But the result of it was that more and more he left Warden to bear the burden and heat of the day alone, and that the latter daily advanced in the trust and confidence of Earl's Dene. Miss Clare did not like him overmuch; but she trusted him and was grateful to him, and that, with her, meant something better than liking. At all events, if he was setting sail under false colors, it was with a fair and favorable wind.

PART V.-CHAPTER X. PART V.—CHAPTER X.

It must not be supposed, however, in spite of what has been said, that the comings in and goings out of so important a person as Hugh Lester were not closely observed by those to whom they were of no consequence at all. Nor must it be supposed that even so unapproachable a person as Madame Clare was by her greatness protected altogether from the insults of her enemies.

One day, when she and her guest were being driven by the family coachman in a dignified manner along the High street, a shabby fellow, conspicuously decorated with the popular colors of green and orange, tossed into her lap the following production of the popular muse, written on a scrap of paper as dignerated as the workers.

"take care tak care o maddom C—e & pra mor carfull Be for Denthrop Quean is not a erl nor a dean but No. 23

"It is sure to be some scurrility or other. No."

But she had hesitated; and so she did read it. Then she did not throw it into the street, but put it quietly into her pocket, dirty as it was.

"And may I not see it too?" asked Miss Raymond.

If Miss Clare had only known what was going on at No. 23 at that very Marie was generally in the room when Hugh called, but not always. She was not an idle person; she was her father's zealous and willing houhsekeeper, and the belidron's purpose and generally her belidron's purpose. zealous and willing houhsekeeper, and the children's nurse and governess besides. If her cousin, who was at home for a holiday, had time and leisure to entertain visitors, she had not. She liked to see Hugh, with whom she had beer me very good friends; but duty had to eome before pleasure, and, as she liked to have her evenings free, for her husband's sake, she had always plenty to do in the day. On this occasion, whatever she might be doing, she was certainly not in the room, which was occupied by Hugh and Angelique only. The cupied by Hugh and Angelique only. The latter was sitting at the harpsichord, but was not playing, unless playing can be held to consist in striking an oc-casional chord, or playing scraps of imaginary tunes with one hand.

A Kingsville Man Has Had a Trying Experience-After Many Failures, He at Last Finds Relief and a Cure.

Heartburn is one of the most painful and dangerous forms of indigestion and is usually followed by chronic dyspepsia. But if nothing worse ever came after, heartburn is bad enough

Mr. John B. Tuckwell, of Kingsville, Ont., was for five years a victim of rtburn in its most distressing form. He tried every remedy he could hear of, but got no relief whatever till at last he got so bad that he could hardly stand it. He used soda, although he knew that in doing so he was seriously and permanently injuring his stomach, but the pain was so great that he could not even sleep. soda relieved him for a time and relief was welcome even if purchased at so high a price.

The alkali of the soda acts on the fermenting mass of undigested food and stops the fermentation for a time, but it is extremely injurious to the delicate tissues of the lining of the stomach and bowels, and should never be taken even as a last resort. Some months ago Mr. Tuckwell heard of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and began treatment of this medicine. the very beginning he found relief and so he was encouraged to keep on for a cure. He was not disappointed, for after a short treatment the symptoms began to disappear altogether and now he is free. He is thankful and takes every opportunity to recommend Dodd's Dyspepesia Tablets to those who suffer from stomach troubles.

Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets have cured many long-standing cases of heartburn and sour stomach, and it is be-lieved that they will cure any ailment arising from a wrong condition of the stomach or digestive organs, such as biliousness, bloating, or headache. Even chronic dyspepsia yields easily to a persistent treatment of this splenmedicine. There are now 15 independent colored churches in Boston, where thirty years ago it was difficult to support
