	1886	12,247	11 26	1895	28,331	12 87	So far the quantity of dairy butter being received is by no means large. Hence the high prices which prevail at present. However, a majority of the dealers consider it unwise to buy at these prices, and they are only taking enough for their current trade. There is little or no export demand. Present prices are from 1c. to 2c. higher than those prevailing at this time last season. For creamery butter there is a steady market, prices being a shade higher than they were last week. The export demand is fairly good.
	1887	14,220	10 00	1896	29,909	12 07	The cheese market rules steady. Importers in Great Britain do not, however, take hold very freely at the prices now obtaining, though the recent reductions on this side have brought about a somewhat increased consumption. At last reports, finest new colored was fetching 54s. to 55s.; new white, 52s. 6d. to 53s. 6d.; finest colored, fall makes, 58s. to 60s.; finest white, fall makes, 56s. to 57s.; under grades, according to quality and condition, 32s. to 47s. Buyers over there are now just taking sufficient for current requirements, as they look for still lower prices. The present prices will no doubt have the effect of stimulating the production.
	1888	16,591	19 72	1897	33,001	11 60	Dealers in eggs are apparently "going it blind." So far as we, and probably anyone else, can see, there is nothing to warrant the prices which are at present being paid at country points. It looks like a case of survival of the fittest. A number of contracts were made for pickled eggs for export some time ago, but the prices obtained would not show any margin under the present conditions. In addition to the high prices which are to-day being paid for eggs, there is another thing to be taken into consideration; the loss "off" and for bad eggs is beginning to show up already quite heavy. Some dealers signify their intention to pull out of the market unless prices go lower.
	1889	19,501	9 33	1898	35,180	12 30	In hog products the market remains very steady with a good consumptive demand in evidence. Hams are reported to be selling very much better this season than last. Some dealers indicate that stocks are already getting into small compass. Practically all lines of smoked meats are in good demand. Packers advise that lard is being sold as quickly as it can be got ready; in fact, a number have orders booked ahead. Barreled pork, especially short cut, is selling freely. Stocks are light, and a number of packers are entirely sold out.
