ARE WE UNDEMOCRATIC?

IT WAS some years ago. A young Canadian was applying for a position with a "big" American concern. The head of the concern was "sizing" the Canadian. He spent some time on the scrutiny. He talked of many things. "Do your provinces look after the asylums and schools or does the federal administration?" he asked casually,

The Canadian knew the correct answer, and he was pleased to give the information. Unconsciously, he scored a point for himself. Other "casual" inquiries came along. The man who was answering didn't pretend to know too much, but when he had specific information he gave it. Then he gradually told about his selling record. He had been doing a "stiff" territory in On-
