Lack of Sympathy in the Home.

There is a surprising lack of common ground or interest between men and women who have bound themseives together for life. You would think that life would be intolerable without it, yet many such couples live day in and day out without an inkling of the thoughts and ambitions that dwell behind the eyes that look across to theirs at the breakfast table. They never raise a voice to enquire, and their only subjects of conversation are domestic ones, differences of and women who have bound themseives together for life. You would think that life would be intolerable without it, yet many such couples live day in and day out without an inkling of the thoughts and ambitions that dwell behind the eyes that look across to theirs at the breakfast table. They never raise a voice to enquire, and their only subjects of conversation are domestic ones, differences of opinion on kindred matters, and such topics as mere acquaintances babble about in light and pleasant vein. There is no complete understanding, no deep sympathy, one with the other, and therefore a voic exists which nothing else can fill.

else can fill.

My obsrvations would tend to teach me that men are rather more lacking in this respect than women. They take the domestic accomplishments of their wives as a matter of course, never commenting upon them except to find fault with some arrangement that is not running smoothly for the mement. Now the home is woman's realm. In it she works, if she is a good wife, and naturally she likes to have her efforts appreciated by word of mouth. The things that would do in making a little go a great way are not cried in the market-place. No ado is made over a woman's work unless she competes with man, but nevertheless the things she does accomplish in the quiet of her home take shell hurt and humiliated in the most shell hurt and humiliated in the most vulnerable spot. Sometimes both misunderstand and are misunderstood, and things go from bad to worse. The one solution is the establishment of sympathy and understanding from the first and its constant cultivation.

will be fixed, about Sept. 15 in all probability.

The recent conference at the city hall put the outside representatives in good fighting trim, and everyone present was more than pleased at the successful start-off of the campaign. The World is being congratulated on all sides. The campaign will do a lot to build up Toronto and its suburbs and make them work together for the common good as one. sides. The campaign will do a lot to build up Toronto and its suburbs and make them work together for the common good as one. The improvement of the electric service as well as the steam roads is part of the committee's program.

"The railways have so far received the delegates with courtesy, and have expressed a desire to take the matter up," said Ald. Church yesterday. "I am hopeful of results. I further believe that under the present sections of the Railway Act (re discrimination) a mandamus will lie to the courts to compel such a service. We want to meet and confer on the subject first, and endeavor to arrive at a suitable settlement. If not, we shall seek redress from the courts and railway commission, and if we receive none then we will go to the parliament of Canada in our fight. Toronto and its suburbs are in this fight for results. The Toronto district wants a suburban service as well as Montreal, and is going to work hard to get it."

Manager O. B. Sheppard of the Princess Theatre has returned to town from his summer home on Lake Simcoe, and when seen yesterday was highly pleased with the outlook for the coming theatrical season in Toronto, his thirty-second as a producer of high-class plays in Toronto. During the summer he has been able to secure for entertainment of local theatregoers almost all of the productions that proved popular successes in New York last season, and the list of plays and musical comedies indicates that the public will have an abundance of high-class entertainment during the coming winter.

Probably the greatest play ever written has been secured for the opening night, Monday, Aug. 31, when there will be presented at the Princess for the first time outside of New York, Charles Frohman's great production "The Thief," by Henri Bernstein. For this production there has been assembled a galaxy of stars such as was never before seen in a road company.

The Sunshine Club is an institution within the Liederkranz, and its members are banded together for the single purpose of combatting dull care. There will be at least 1000 of them at the park on Wednesday night.

In addition to special illumination, one of the features of the evening will be a German concert. The open-air acts, as seen last night, include Prof. Kreisel's animal troupe. The performing cats and dogs in this show are especially good. The bill also includes an excellent acrobatic act and some other very good features.

VANCOUVER, Aug. 23.—(Special.)—
Harry Brown, 28, engineer at the Vancouver Power Company's plant at Lake Buntzen, twenty miles from Vancouver, was fatally shot late Saturday afternoon while bear hunting.

With a companion named Hamshaw, Brown left the power house on the North Arm Burrard Inlet. He saw a bear twenty yards away. Brown climbed up a cliff, cocking his gun as he ran. He was just ready to shoot when he slipped and fell backward. His gun discharged and a load of buckshot lodged in his right arm and breast. Hamshaw carried him to the boat, and they reached Vancouver at midnight. Brown died of shock and loss of blood.

"The Last Rose of Summer' she sings beautifully. And again the program reminds you to "Wait for Zallah." The Texas Steer Quartet have good songs and comedy, and in the intermission Adolph Wohl of the orchestra performs the difficult "Raymond" Overture on the xylophone without a break.

"The Pajama and the Nightie" is a very pretty musical offering by the company, and "The Days of Forty-Nine" has bona fide stage business that is a real novelty. But "Wait for Zallah!" She gildes in all of a sudden in spangles and pink tights, and with castinets continuously busy does as the billboard promises. She dances peculiar.

The world's famous Empire Comedy Four consist of the usual bunch, a Willie, a smart guy, Heiny and Patsy. They sing some tuneful ditties and the other three abuse the Dutchman.

Violet Black and Company in a one-act comedy entitled "In the Subway" furnish the special attraction. There is something doing all the time, and the action never flags. It is the old theme of mistaken identity and jumping to conclusions, but is served up in a new and attractive way that makes you forget you ever saw any like it before. The Bessit Valdare Troupe of Cyclists are very good, and on a number of stunts that well deserved the applause elicited. One of the troupe is Miss Evelyn Robson, sister of Will Robson, Toronto's own clever skater, and her performance—she is one of the two who do the "double" turn—is as graceful as the trick is difficult.

Chic little Estelle Rose won a host of friends and admirers in P. S. Clark's production of "The Runaway Giris" at the opening of the Gayety Theatre yesterday, and her hit was not scored solely in her interpretation of the Salome dance, which was by all odds the head-line feature of the crisp burlesque. Her personality had won its great degree of favor before the curtain went down on the first musical satire, "The Sultan's Dilemma," in which Miss Rose sang "My Zu Zu Man," and assisted Frank Bamsel in an Indian song and dance entitled "My Copper Colored"

Frank Pamsel in an Indian song and dance entitled "My Copper Colored Squaw," the chorus of which was taken up lustily by the occupants of the two galleries. By actual count there were 112 ladies in the matinee audience, and the refined order of the play and excellence of the chorus work would presage that ladies will patronize the house in plenty during the Runaway Girls' entire engagement.

The Salome dance was beautifully executed by the lithe little Estelle Rose. True, it has been toned down considerably from the original version, and the management are to be congratulated in the success of their efforts in this regard. Miss Rose first appears in a clinging black empire gown of the directoire effect, and after singing a fetching little French song she retires behind a white drop curtain, upon which a strong light from behind casts her shadow as she changes her constructions of the construction of the construction of the shadow as she changes her constructions of the construction of the co her shadow as she changes her cos-tume for the historic dance.
