Things That Make for Comfort and Charm in House or Flat

Grasscloth for Walls

Makes a Charming Covering, Especially for Dining-rooms or Living-rooms—Obtainable in Delightful Colors.

IT COMES FROM JAPAN, being woven from the bark or skin of the honeysuckle which grows on the mountain sides. And with his native genius for color, the Eastern dyer contributes to it an exceptional beauty of tone. Grasscloth is one of the most interesting and effective of modern wall coverings.

It is available in almost any shade you might desire for your living-room, dining-room or hall. The choice includes both Delft and the softer old French blues, besides a shot effect of blue and gold. Buff, grey, ivory, biscuit, straw, plaster and sand shades are procurable; so, too, are several brown and natural wood tints, and olive and leaf greens. Two-tone and metal effects are also obtainable.

Japanese in origin, grasscloth is especially happy as a background for lacquer, Chinese Chippendale and other furniture of Oriental flavor. It adapts itself just as readily, however, to the more conventional schemes of furnishing.

It is put up in rolls of 8 yards in length and 36 inches in width, and is priced, in plain color effects, at 50 cents a yard, and in metallic finish, at 75 cents a yard.

DUPLEX AVENUE IS USELESS FOR CARS

R. C. Harris Tells Works Committee Control of Yonge St. Necessary.

COULD NOT COMPETE

Ald. Ball Declares Extension Was Not Requested by Old Town Residents.

With only Controller Foster and Alderman Burgess dissenting, the works committee decided yesterday to go ahead with the work of extending Duplex avenue to Chaplin crescent, the city at large to pay 67.37 per cent. of the estimated cost of $183,800 and the properties directly benefited to pay the balance. The abandoning of the work south of Chaplin crescent saves the city $283,700.

Controller Foster sought to have the whole work left in Eberance for an indefinite period, while Ald. Burgess argued that it was poor economy to out the extension off at Chaplin crescent. Let the extension go thru to Lawton avenue as council had at one time decided, he argued, and North Toronto would have a thoroughfare for a civic car line to relieve congestion on Yonge street and also a club to hold over the Metropolitan. North Toronto people, he said, could not wait four years till the Toronto Street Railway franchise expired before having a car line to link up with the civic system of 1921.

In reply Commissioner Harris declared his conviction that the extension of Duplex avenue should have never been undertaken. Even when times were normal, he said, he could not see any justification for the work. Its benefits would be confined to a very small section of the community, and as a street for a civic car line he said it would be useless.

Only Way Out.

"The only way North Toronto will ever secure transportation relief," the commissioner declared, "is by getting control of Yonge street. It is the only logical street for a car line, and the people would not take the trouble to save two cents fare to walk a block west to get a civic car and travel by a circuitous route to the C. P. R. tracks. In my opinion it would be no club to hold over the Metropolitan. If the people protested against walking 1,000 feet from the Toronto street railway terminal to the Metropolitan terminal, how much more justification would they have for protesting against walking 3,000 feet to a civic line, which is the nearest connection you could give them?"

If civic car lines were to come on the west side of Yonge street, the commissioner added, they must first come on Avenue road and Bathurst street.

Ald. Ball contended that the Duplex avenue extension had never been asked for by the people of the old town of North Toronto. When the matter had been before council the ex-mayor and a large number of ratepayers appeared in protest. They did not consider it was either necessary as a thoroughfare, and certainly not of any use as a competitor with the Metropolitan railway. If North Toronto expects transportation relief, the alderman contended, it must come by way of Yonge street, which is the logical thoroughfare.

Cherry Street Pavement. Quite a debate ensued on the recommendation of the commissioner's lay as a local improvement a granite block pavement on Cherry street opposite the National Iron Works on the west side and the British-American Oil Co. on the east side. The total cost is estimated at $41,300. In spite of objections from the oil people the committee adopted the recommendation of the works commissioner.

Without any debate the committee decided to request the Toronto Urban Railway Co. to construct and operate car lines on all streets north of Dundas street.

Ald. Eydling failed to have the committee recommend an appropriation of $8,000 for rounding dangerous corners in Toronto. He made particular reference to the corner of St. Helena avenue and Dundas street.

Commissioner Harris was instructed to write the proper officials and urge the necessity of a shelter at the terminus of the Metropolitan car line on Yonge street.

NO MISREPRESENTATION FOUND IN THIS CASE

Judge Denton Could See No Fraud in Port Weller Real Estate Deal.

In an action in the county court yesterday, Judge Denton gave judgment in favor of the Canadian Securities Corporation against John R. Eastwood of Hamilton in a case in which the corporation were the plaintiffs to recover $48,250 due on an agreement of sale in 1914 of a lot at Port Weller to Eastwood. Judge Denton exonerated the corporation from any fraud or misrepresentation, upon any fraud or misrepresentation, which defendant alleged he had been subjected to in purchasing the lot, remarking: "There is no fraud that I can see in the case. At most it is a case of the agent exceeding, if he did exceed, his authority in the selling of this property." Defendant had purchased the property on an alleged misrepresentation on the part of an agent of the corporation, by whom he alleges he was told that city conveniences would be installed, no foreigners allowed in the district, a street car service provided, and one hundred houses built. Although defendant counter-claimed for a return of his deposit money and release from the agreement of sale on misrepresentation, the judgment was against him.

WATER SUPPLY THREATENED.

Piling Up of Ice in Potomac Worries Washington.

Special to The Toronto World. Washington, Feb. 9.—The water supply of the national capital tonight is threatened, and fire-boats are engaged in an effort to break the ice in the Potomac River, that threatens the aqueduct through which runs the great main viaduct. As the ice is piled high against the bridge, it is feared that a thaw or a sudden rain will weaken the ice packs and sweep the structure away. Army engineers are studying the situation, and it is believed that the danger may be averted.
