FINANCIAL and COMMERCIAL

BUSINESS REVIVAL IS ANTICIPATED

Canada is a Better Place for Investment Than the United States.

(Victoria Colonist.) The opinion seems to be general in banking circles that the financial situation in Canada from now on will show marked signs of improvement, although the change for the better will be gradual. It is pointed out that no one has expected in this country to cause hard times. The crops are not as large as last year, but prices are better and the farmers will have more money. Railway construction has been and will continue to be active. People are coming into the country in great numbers and all of them are bringing some money with them. The banks have shown themselves to be in an exceedingly good position, and the distress into which United States investments have lately come will undoubtedly induce British capitalists to look with greater favor upon things which they have heretofore regarded with suspicion. The elements of substantial business prosperity, and while there is bound to be more or less of a lull in the United States, there is no reason whatever for anticipating any trouble, and people are quite safe to form their plans for the future with confidence so far as a general condition of business is concerned. We are inclined to anticipate an early recovery of the Canadian business, and the reason for this is the demonstration of the substantial character of our property, which the signs of the past few months has brought out. The time was when such a little disturbance as has affected the United States would almost have paralyzed the Dominion; but the effect in the present instance has only been to cause a little temporary inconvenience. Our excellent banking system, the immensity of our resources and the high reputation of our courts for the protection of all classes of people will beget confidence abroad as well as at home, and we can claim with justice that, perhaps for the first time in the history of this country, Canada can fairly be said to be more favorably regarded from the standpoint of the investor than any other part of North America. Business is not going to stand still because the thimble-riggers of New York have made a bad mess of things, and a country where the laws are good and well administered cannot fail to profit by the discredit cast upon the money market of the United States as upon what has hitherto been regarded as the most promising field for new enterprises. Under these circumstances we can see no reason why the Canadian people should follow the ill-fated example of their neighbors and hoard their money. They are safe to use it just as they have been accustomed to use it. That is, spend what they can afford for legitimate purposes and deposit what they have no immediate use for in the banks, where it will be available for general business. If this be followed the business revival will come in a short time, and we may add that when it does come it is likely to surpass anything which the Dominion has ever witnessed.
