

Now For Sparkling Musical Comedy at The Opera House

Finale of Act I of the Big Musical Success, "WHEN DREAMS COME TRUE," at the Opera House, Mon., Tues. and Wed. Nights and Wed. Matinee.

The attraction at the Opera House Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Wednesday matinee, will be "When Dreams Come True," a musical comedy that had a great vogue in Chicago and New York, in which cities it was played for more than one year to crowded houses. "When Dreams Come True" is described as a musical comedy of youth, and was written by Philip Bartholomae, author of "Little Miss Brown," "Very Good Eddie," and "Over Night," three of the most successful farces ever produced. The excellence of his previous efforts at play-making has been duplicated by Mr. Bartholomae in the book of "When Dreams Come True," with the result that he has produced one of the most amusing and diverting librettos ever seen on the stage. The musical numbers are from the prolific pen of Silvio Hain, one of the younger composers, who has gained much acclaim as a composer.

The story of "When Dreams Come True" concerns the adventures of a young American, who is stranded in Paris, and his efforts to return home. The complications that ensue furnish much scope for farcical situations and the author has taken full advantage of the opportunities offered. The locale of the different scenes affords the scenic artist a wide range, and some of the most novel examples of his art are shown during the action of the piece. The first act shows the storage deck of an ocean liner, and this scene has been pronounced by critics one of the most realistic scenes ever shown on a stage.

Two Advances of 500 Yards

London, Sept. 29.—Steadily the British troops are pushing forward toward the Peronne-Bapaume road, the main artery immediately behind the German lines north of Cambrai. After taking 500 yards of trenches southwest of Le Sars, General Sir Douglas Haig's men made additional progress in the capture of 500 yards of German trenches east of Lebaucourt.

The British occupation of territory between Thiepval and the Ancre is being contested strongly by the Germans. A German counter-attack, following the entry of the British into a section of the Heauland trenches resulted in the forcing back of the holders. The section was regained later, however, by the British, London says. Heavy fighting also has occurred around the Stiff redoubt. Rain is hampering operations on the remainder of the Anglo-French front north of the Somme, according to official statements. Paris mentions activity following the advance between Fregicourt and Morval toward Sailly, on the Peronne-Bapaume road.

Got Seventeen At Campbellton

Most Successful Effort For Kilties; Meeting at Loch Lomond This Evening; Business Men's Platoon

The most successful meeting since the inauguration of the campaign for the raising of the 26th Kiltie battalion was held last night at Campbellton, when seventeen recruits were attested. Other meetings in different parts of the province provided eight more recruits.

A Special Platoon
It is reported in military circles that the young business men of the city have decided to raise a platoon here for the 26th Kiltie battalion.

Loch Lomond Meeting
No recruits were secured last night at the recruiting meeting at Loch Lomond. The meeting was held in the hall of the L. O. L., No. 219, by courtesy of Wallace Galbraith. Miss Gertrude McEarg gave a reading and Miss Gibbs an exhibition of Scotch dancing. The speakers were Sergt. Whitnack and Capt. May, followed by Lieut. Knowlton and Major Morgan.

Loch Lomond Tonight
Tonight a big meeting is planned at Loch Lomond, and in all probability the civilian speakers will be Commissioner Wigmore and F. L. Fette.

THRILLING STORIES OF GALLANTRY OF CANADIAN OFFICER

London, Sept. 29.—(Montreal Gazette Cable)—Details which have just reached London of the death in action of Lieut. Pringle, son of the Nova Scotia chaplain, show that he made a heroic stand before he fell a victim of a German bullet. As his battalion, which was composed mainly of Montreal men, was advancing toward the German trenches Lieut. Pringle discovered a concealed machine gun and, single-handed, he charged and killed the whole crew with his revolver. After he had accomplished this he was instantly killed by an enemy bullet.

Captain Chrysler and Captain Williams were wounded in the same action. Lieut. Eric Dennis, son of Senator Dennis, of Halifax, hit on the head by a shell, was saved by his helmet.

A young soldier with the Nova Scotia battalion lost part of his nose by a shell fragment but refused to stop fighting, saying he was going to get a Hun before he stopped. He got to the German trenches, captured a German, and marched back to a dressing station for treatment.

DAYLIGHT SCHEME ENDS IN ENGLAND ON OCT. 1
New York, Sept. 29.—Legal time in Great Britain will be put back one hour beginning at 9 a.m. October 1, it was announced today by the Commercial Cable Company. The announcement means that British time from October 1 will be the same as it was before the daylight saving system was inaugurated on the morning of May 21, when all clocks in the country were pushed forward one hour at 2 o'clock, in accordance with the requirements of the daylight saving act.

INSURANCE MEN MEET DOMINION PRESIDENT

An enthusiastic gathering of life insurance underwriters was held last evening at Bonda, the members of the professional gathering to meet J. Burt Morgan, president of the Life Insurance Underwriters' Association of Canada. A tasty banquet had been prepared and the evening was spent in the pleasures of the table, story, speech and song.

Hewitson, president of the local branch of the association, was in the chair with President Morgan on his right and Mayor Hayes to his left. Guests of the evening included J. A. Likely, president of the board of trade, and ex-Governor Tweedie. The speeches of the evening were largely on matters pertaining to life insurance and many phases of the business were under review.

After the toast to the King had been honored, G. Wetmore Merritt proposed the toast to Mr. Morgan.

The toast to the City of St. John was ably proposed by Charles Owens, and responded to by Mayor Hayes, and that to Our Profession was proposed by J. W. V. Lawlor and acknowledged by J. S. Lord. The concluding toast of the evening, Our Guests, was proposed by G. G. Jordan and brought forth replies from J. A. Likely and ex-Governor Tweedie.

Mr. Likely urged that in life insurance, as in other businesses, the motto of the Retail Merchants' Association might be followed to advantage, Buy in Your Home Town.

Dr. Salas were given by E. W. Bonnell and Steve Matthews, and the gathering dispersed with the singing of Auld Lang Syne and the National Anthem. D. Arnold Fox was the accompanist of the evening.

LET THE SHIELDING SHADOW GUIDE YOU TO THE UNIQUE MONDAY

Hear the Arlington Banjo Orchestra Also; Two Banner Attractions

To every lover of the silent drama special significance is centered in the announcement that the first chapter of the wonderful serial, "The Shielding Shadow," will be shown at the Unique the first three days of next week. There is no possible doubt as to the success of this masterpiece in serial drama as it is from the pen of the author of the Iron Claw and other successes. Spectacular, a clean cut story, capable cast, etc., are all combined in this fifteen act continued photoplay. It is decidedly important that the first episode should be seen so that the entire story can be followed with intelligence and more interest.

The Arlington Banjo orchestra is another banner attraction which will make its first appearance on Monday afternoon. No advance in prices. Matinees begin at two, three and four o'clock. Snap is gone and at seven, eight, ten and nine-fifteen o'clock.

RID YOURSELF OF BODILY WEAKNESS

A DISTRACTING CONDITION THAT THE PERMANENTLY CURED BY FERROZEE-A PLEASANT REMEDY IN TABLET FORM TO BE TAKEN AFTER EACH MEAL.

All fagged out ideas come as slow as molasses in January. You think of things just a minute or so too late. Snap is gone and the buoyancy and strength that makes life a pleasure, that's gone, too.

The doctor would say that you are run down, and you don't eat or digest enough. You slumber, require some aid, and probably your digestion needs a bracer. The blood should have phosphorus and iron to strengthen and purify it.

Now Ferrozee is a wonderful blood maker and nerve stimulant. It is really a food for the food, nerves and vital energy, and will improve your run down condition in a very short time.

Ferozee will make you strong and capable of doing a heavy day's work without fatigue. It is a marvellous remedy and does marvellous things as the following testimonial proves: "After my baby was born I was left in a weak, sickly condition, totally unfit for a mother's household duties. I was excitable and nervous, and trifling things would not gain strength, although I took milk extracts and tonics all the time. A lady friend recommended Ferrozee, which I used with splendid results. The first box helped quite a little and when I had taken six boxes my former health, ruddy cheeks and good spirits, were fully restored."

You can't spend 80c. to a better advantage than on a box of Ferrozee, and the sooner you get Ferrozee, the sooner you will be well. Don't accept a substitute, but insist on your druggist supplying the genuine Ferrozee which sells for 80c. a box, or three boxes for $1.25.

ST. JOHN NURSES ARRIVE IN ENGLAND
Toronto, Sept. 29.—Dr. C. J. Coppe, medical head of the St. John's Ambulance in Canada, tonight received a cable from Mrs. John A. Henderson, of Montreal, announcing that the group of volunteer probationer nurses from various parts of the dominion who sailed under her charge have arrived safely in England and have gone direct to Devonshire House for duty in the various military hospitals.

There are two St. John nurses in this party, Miss Janella Bridges and Miss Marion Magee.

MULTI-MILLIONAIRE TO BE POLICE COMMISSIONER
Detroit, Sept. 29.—James Couzens, multi-millionaire and formerly vice-president of the Ford Motor Company, has accepted the appointment of police commissioner of Detroit.

Labor Congress
The labor congress meeting in Toronto to yesterday voted to increase the size of the executive council from three to five men. The officers will consist of the president, three vice-presidents and secretary-treasurer.

FEAR MORAL EFFECT OF GENERAL RETREAT

Simonds Doubts That Germans Will Give up Yet in West

Are the Enemy Reserves Actually Exhausted?—Some Retirement Likely Unless Germans Rightly Calculate That Push Costs Allies Too Much

(By Frank H. Simonds)
If they are not exceedingly short of men the Germans will not make a general retreat on the western front. They will not do this because the moral effect at home would be considerable and in France it would be tremendous. It would be the assurance of final victory, and it would practically liberate France, and Germany would no longer have a single hold upon the French which might serve as the basis for bargaining when it comes time to discuss peace.

But, in addition, if the Germans retreat fighting over every mile the result will be the total destruction of the country over which they retreat, and the German commanders plainly realize that the French people will presently weary of having all their northern territory turned into a desert and a wasteland, the same ruin overtaking Lille, Roubaix, Tourcoing, St. Quentin and Laon which has overtaken Arras, Soissons, Reims and Verdun.

If you are to believe one school of commentators, and they have a strong appeal to credence, the Germans have actually reached the point where their reserves are exhausted. Harrier Belle is the best exponent of this view, and he presents weekly interesting evidence to support it. This is the French view; the view of the French officers, from Joffre down, the view that Joffre has recently expressed, both publicly and in private talks with Americans, who have repeated his word to me.

In the opinion of these men Germany has no more men immediately available and will have men before next spring, when the class of 1918 will be available. Now, if this view of the French staff is correct, and it is a natural by-product of a very wide range of information and evidence, there will be a shortening of the German lines in the west before winter, and it will not be a minor change; it will be a retirement of the front lines, and the evacuation of all of France.

An Actual Disaster
Again, if the Germans are as short of men as the French general staff believes, then there may be an actual disaster when the retreat begins. This is what happened to Lee before Richmond. He held on with insufficient numbers long after his military judgment counseled a retreat, because of the abandonment of the Confederate capital. One of the best informed of my correspondents recently expressed the belief that a general German retreat would cost 100,000 prisoners and a colossal loss of guns and material.

Later reports from the Somme front, particularly from the French side, state that the German lines have been actually pierced at certain points and that there have been operations recalling the old fighting in the open before the advent of the Marne campaign. But, on the other hand, I have been informed from Paris that aerial observation has disclosed that the Germans have constructed trench lines, one behind the other, for a very great distance, and that there is no chance that these lines will be pierced.

On the German side there is a natural insistence that there is no shortage of men, both publicly and in private talks. There is the most convincing assertion that the Germans believe that the Allied losses are so great that the French and British will have to give up.

An Officer's Experience

French Lieutenant Tells of Situation When He Fell in Advance Against the Germans

An anonymous French lieutenant now recovering from his wounds on this side of the Atlantic has given a particularly vivid account of military operations which we read of daily, but fail, very often, to appreciate. Particularly is it interesting in that it deals with events in the craters or shell craters while a battle is being fought, and the situation of those soldiers who find themselves caught between two fires, daring neither to advance nor to retreat, since they may be destroyed by their own artillery, operated in ignorance that their own nationals are in such a position, or by the enemy, should they endeavor to go forward. The lieutenant who describes just one operation, the offensive in which he was seriously wounded, says that it was known to him the night before that he and his company of infantry, together with thousands of others, were expected to go forward the next morning.

The preliminary bombardment began at midnight. It was impossible to sleep, and so he and his men arose and began to make their preparations. Long before dawn the order to advance was given, and they moved into the first-line trenches. There they awaited the bombardment, which continued. Some of them were able to go to sleep. Most of them rested, but the night passed over him, and he lost consciousness. When he recovered he was over his head from both sides. He could see nobody in front, nobody in the rear. The ground was covered with the dead and wounded. Not far off there was a rise in the ground which promised possible shelter. Painfully he dragged himself into it, and suddenly found himself above a hole or cave in which he hid. Several French soldiers, some of them wounded, he was hailed down and his wound dressed. But he found that he had not greatly improved his position. There was a fortified German trench thirty feet away, from which at any moment might come a bombing party.

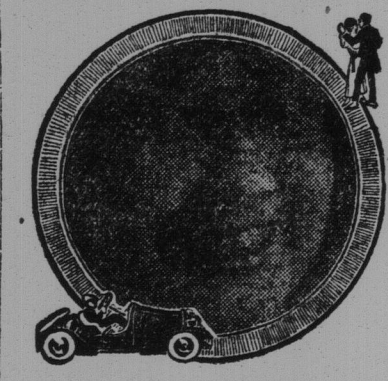

Between Two Fires.
The French in the meantime had come to the conclusion that any of their men so far advanced into the enemy's lines were either killed or desperately wounded, for they continued to spray the ground with high explosives. After mental suffering that lasted hours, and in which several of the occupants of the crater were killed, it was decided that one of them should try to crawl back to the French lines, which were having fallen. It was agreed that if he got back he should propose that a tunnel be dug toward the crater and that the little company should thus be rescued. If this was not practicable another machine gun signal was agreed upon which would notify the men in the hole that they must make their own way back in several days. So the hero departed, and after an eternity, as it seemed, the signal came that no tunnel should be dug. So the prisoners crawled cautiously to the surface, as well as their wounds would permit, and essayed the task of getting back to their own lines.

Back to the Trench.
Our friend the lieutenant, having a shattered elbow, could not crawl on hands and knees. He had to go on his back, propelling himself with his heels. Every moment fears were burning over him and the bullets hummed like bees. In the dark he would collide with dead men in all positions. One was on his hands and knees, and it was a shock for the wounded officer to stop in the glare of a shell and find himself looking up into the glazed eyes of a dead brother officer, who had died while kneeling down. Half conscious, he continued his progress, and his story continued.—Meanwhile the German shells kept falling in rapid succession. I was covered with earth several times, and once roughly handled. But now the trench was very near. I shouted with all my strength—"France, France, I am the lieutenant of the Eleventh Company." I heard voices which said—"This way, this way." I was exhausted. I got entangled in wire defences. My arm hurt unbearably. I felt myself being seized and pulled. I fell into the trench, the French trench. Then I fainted."
