HAD THRILLING TIME IN THE BAY

Carleton Men Home Today Tell of Hard Experience

GRIM BATTLE WITH DEATH

A. J. Boddington and Moses White Thought They Would Never See Homes. Again as They Tossed About at Mercy of Storm

After an experience of two days in the very jaws of death, Arthur J. Boddington and Moses White of West St. John today returned to their homes which, for a while, they had never expected to see again. For two days they were tossed about in the Bay of Fundy in a helpless motor boat without food, without an opportunity to rest and in the mercy of a gale in freezing weather. Their craft was disabled while on their way from St. Andrew's to St. John and when they finally sighted land it was on the shores of Nova Scotia. After strenuous exertions they managed to reach the shore, safe but exhausted and suffering from the effects of their terrible experience.

Their Thrilling Story

Mr. Boddington and Mr. White left West St. John a fortnight ago and went down the bay, where they were engaged in towing a water scow from Chamcook to the dredge Irigouls at St. Andrew's. They got an early breakfast on last Friday morning and left port for the return trip about eleven o'clock in the morning. As they were getting away from L'Isle the fly wheel of one of their engines broke, but they proceeded under the power supplied by the other engine. During the day a gale came up but they were getting along all right until eleven o'clock at night when the crank shaft of the second engine broke and they were left helpless. At this time they were between Lorneville and St. John, not far off shore and they burned torches in the hope that they might be seen from the shore and rescued. There was no answer to their signals, however, and they began to drift out to sea.

Steadily Bailing

From Friday night until Sunday morning they were swept about by wind and tide at every moment in danger of instant death. Soon after their engine broke down the stern of the scow was smashed in the windows of the cabin and after that every sea which washed them off the deck was a barrel of water on board. It took the utmost exertions to keep the boat bailed out to prevent her filling and sinking and this work had to be kept up steadily without intermission.

Fortunately they had a large stock of gasoline on board and as especially heavy waves approached a quantity of the oil was thrown overboard to lessen the effect of the sea and this helped them somewhat. On Saturday morning they sighted land, but were helpless to approach nearer and were swept out to sea again. On Sunday morning they again drew near the shore and in an effort to help themselves nearer the land the oilskins were torn up and rigged as sails, but this was of little use. It was only by pure luck that they happened to be carried nearer and for several hours the men watched the movement of their craft towards shore with hope alternating with despair.

Finally the struck, and Mr. Boddington managed to get White, who was more exhausted of the two, out of the boat and on a rock from which he could wade to the shore. He himself stayed by the boat in the hope of saving it, but the heavy sea pounded the craft on the rocks and filled her soon causing the boat to sink and Mr. Boddington had to swim to shore.

After they had landed they were sighted by some of the residents of the district and taken to the home of Edgar Titus, near Titus Cove, where they landed, and here everything possible for their comfort was done by Mr. Titus and his neighbors. They stayed there recuperating until Tuesday when they were driven to Bridgetown and took passage last evening on a coasting steamer which brought them to port this morning.

Mr. White is still suffering from the effects of the awful experience, but Mr. Boddington is little the worse for it, except for a bad cold.

The men are grateful to Providence for their escape, which seemed to them almost miraculous. If it had been an open boat instead of one of the enclosed type nothing could have saved them from watery graves and even with such a boat it was only their pluck and their determined fight against heavy odds which enabled them to pull through.

TWO YEARS IN THE BANK CASE

Wm. Macintyre Sentenced By Judge Forbes

COMMUTATION EXPECTED

His Honor Will Willingly Recommend It to Department of Justice—Petition to Be Sent Forward to Minister Along These Lines

William Macintyre, ex-accountant in the Bank of Nova Scotia, this morning pleaded guilty to the theft of $10,000 of the bank's funds, and was sentenced by Judge Forbes to two years in Dorchester penitentiary. The prisoner took his position very coolly and was unmoved on his sentence being pronounced. The disposition of the crown officers apparently was that Macintyre should be shown leniency. The maximum penalty was not urged and his honor said no hesitation in saying that he would willingly recommend to the department of justice that Macintyre be released on parole. "I do not believe in making a great moral example of anyone," he said, "I believe in punishing a man if he deserves it."

Yielded to Temptation

When the charge was read over to the prisoner he at once elected to be tried without jury, and on being arraigned pleaded guilty. J. B. M. Baxter, K.C., who appeared in the prisoner's behalf, briefly addressed the court, pleading only for leniency. "Macintyre has broken the law," he said, "and deserves some sort of punishment. He yielded to his sudden impulse of temptation brought about by some unfortunate occurrence in his own financial affairs. He was impelled to do this, and for the moment forgot his duty to the bank. The money was not taken by reason of any special confidence; he merely took advantage of the opportunity afforded him by the general confidence imposed in him."

"It is the future, I will ask Your Honor to look to. He is a young man only twenty-six, and can make a way for himself in the world. If, however, a very long sentence is imposed, it will only make him a social outcast."

The Judge

In imposing sentence His Honor said, "I do not give you to my own feelings, I would deal with you leniently and lightly, but I am here to enforce the law. You have confessed and it is my duty to impose sentence. It is a very serious matter for a bank or an institution having a large number of trusted employees with great responsibilities to have one of these trusted employees break the law and impose a sentence upon him. The question of dealing with you applies not to you alone, but there are hundreds of employees in the bank waiting the outcome of this trial. "But I care not for that. I do not believe in punishing a man if he deserves it. No man regrets this and there is no duty to be put a stain on you, but don't be discouraged. Many men have suffered this and have afterwards risen to great eminence. The sentence of this court is that you be taken to Dorchester penitentiary and there kept hard labor for a period of two years. You have a great many friends in the city, and I have no doubt that they will work to have your sentence commuted, and I will not hesitate to recommend to the department of justice that you be released on parole."

F. R. Taylor appeared in the interest of the Bank of Nova Scotia, and C. H. Ferguson for the prosecution. It is understood that petition will be made to the minister of justice within a very short time for the release of Macintyre on parole. It is said that the bank authorities are ready and willing to take in such a petition.

REV. L. G. MACNEILL ESTATE IS $13,000

Will Probated Today — Two Other Matters Before Judge Armstrong

In the probate court today the will of Rev. L. G. Macneill was proved. He left a wife, Mary Grey, his house, hold furniture and certain specific articles to each of his five sons; the rest of his property to his wife and five sons, Frederick C. Murray, Eric Frew, William C. and James Kennedy Macneill, and he nominates his wife and his sons Frederick C. and William C. as executors. The last named renouncing, the first two were sworn in as executors. There is no real estate, personally $18,000. Inches & Hazen are probators.

In the matter of Rhoda May, Gertrude Agnes, James George and Eleanor Elizabeth Fleming, the petition of George W. Fleming, foundryman, father of the four infants, children by his late wife Henrietta Mary Fleming, the Eastern Trust Company was appointed guardian of the respective estates of the infants. Such estates consist of an interest in the estates of their grandfather the late Hon. James Holly and his wife, Aramantia A. Holly, both deceased. Barnhill, Ewing & Sanford are probators.

The court took up the matter of the estate of Mrs. Catherine Murray, widow of Bernard Murray, constable. She died intestate. No one else administering. Frances Haggood, a creditor, was appointed administratrix. There was no personal property to speak of and a petition was presented for the obtaining of a license to sell the real estate on the corner of Elliott Row and Pitt street, such real estate being subject to a charge of $1000. This property was subsequently sold under such license to sell and now the administratrix files her accounts, with list of claims proved against the estate for the payment of which it is not likely there will be any money available. A citation was issued returnable on Dec. 8 at 11 a. m. Robert G. Murray is probator.

THE DREDGE IRIGOUIS

It is expected that the dredge Irigouis will complete its work for the season at St. Andrew's in a few days. She will then be towed to St. John.
