

the arena. Half an hour before the fight, the arena was opened, and a large number of people were gathered on the platform where Fitzsimmons were to fight.

The ring was of pine drawn together and braced with ropes. The padded, and comments of the fighters' heads against the hard of a knock-down were Corbett's adviser, was tested the ropes, etc. He thought to suit him, and section the ropes were ready to challenge the fight. Fitzsimmons, who had been early and surveyed the air of a connoisseur, was in a bolted position. He had a green tie and a green badge in honor of the crowd was still in the gates, and the spectators were in covering

L. SULLIVAN'S was the signal for an out. But beyond a broad-champion paid no attention.

There was no wind, and the conditions were perfect. No one seemed to find fault of the hour, and the fight was on, but to be 11 o'clock. At 11 o'clock, the fight was on, and the crowd was in the hands of the York World. This was a cheer, and Sullivan called in he reached the ring he

There is no necessity of anything more. I mean I am going to try one. There is one fighter was greeted with shouts of "John." There were many, but he was in the Billy Madden then engaged collected $2,500 with Warren York for Joe Goddard to enter of this fight, giving time inside of one year, and $2,500 for Sharwiner, which will be delivered in response to call. He then went to the ring, and and I would like to have I don't think either of thing on me."

cheered and Sharkey was platform. Shortly after Fitzsimmons entered, and to his dressing room, where the stove so as not to cheerfully chatted

There were about 5,000 people gathered to see the fight. About a dozen good fell, but the majority of the men.

not start from his camp expected, and did not resting room until after her told the men to get said they were all ready to come in. Fitzsimmons from his dressing room, and led the procession and three followed. Corbett minute later, and his men were duly cheered.

Some passed his wife by the hand and kissed her. Fitzsimmons climbed into the

but Corbett was close to him. He had a broad grin on his face, and pink dressing led the procession and three followed. Corbett minute later, and his men were duly cheered.

Some passed his wife by the hand and kissed her. Fitzsimmons climbed into the

but Corbett was close to him. He had a broad grin on his face, and pink dressing

led the procession and three followed. Corbett minute later, and his men were duly cheered.

Some passed his wife by the hand and kissed her. Fitzsimmons climbed into the

but Corbett was close to him. He had a broad grin on his face, and pink dressing

led the procession and three followed. Corbett minute later, and his men were duly cheered.

both were tan colored. Corbett wore a red, white and blue belt with a green buckle. His trunks were green, and he wore white socks rolled down over the tops of his shoes.

Fitzsimmons wore dark blue trunks with small American flags. He ordered the men to shake hands.

Julian prevented it by saying: "No, you refused it once." They walked to their corners.

THE FIGHT BY ROUNDS. The following is a complete account of the fight:

Round 1.—Both men sparred cautiously for an opening, Fitzsimmons being on the aggressive, Corbett keeping away. Fitzsimmons seeing that he must force matters went after his man and crowded Corbett back into the latter's corner. Both made vigorous swings with the left and both missed, both men staggering against the ropes. Fitzsimmons still kept crowding Corbett, and getting landed a right in the face, Corbett landed a right in return. A second later he repeated the dose and again missed the counter which Fitzsimmons sent in. Both men clinched, and in the breakaway Fitzsimmons got in a hard left on Corbett's chin, staggering him. He followed this with a left on the upper half of the neck, staggering him a second time.

Corbett sent in a left counter in return and then ducked and ran away from a vicious fourth round. Corbett landed a right on Fitzsimmons' jaw and left on neck. Corbett

landed right on Fitz's jaw. Both landed hard, and they clinched. Fitzsimmons followed up with a left on jaw and ducked a vicious left hand swing. Corbett missed a right on

body and they clinched. Jim missed a left hand swing, and Corbett landed left on jaw. A light left on the head and they clinched. Jim landed hard on the jaw and right on the head. He landed the left on jaw

again. Fitzsimmons hit Corbett hard on the head, staggering him. Corbett gave Fitzsimmons a hard left on the jaw, and then led again and missed.

Corbett landed his right on the body, a left on the ear, a light right on the jaw, and they clinched. Corbett landed his left on the jaw and right on the body, and the men clinched. Corbett landed a hard left on the jaw and Fitzsimmons

clinched, being a trifle dazed by the succession of blows he had received. Jim landed a right on the body, and then came in for a left on the jaw. Fitzsimmons landed on the head with left and got in a right hand jab on the body as the

round closed. Corbett seemed the fresher of the two. He got first blood, which was coming from Fitzsimmons' mouth as the round sounded. Jim refused refreshments, but Fitzsimmons

drank from a bottle. Round 2.—Both men opened with left on face and Corbett was crowded to the ropes. Fitzsimmons made a wild swing for the body and a second clinch followed. Corbett ducked from a vicious left intended for the jaw, and then put a hard right hand up on the chin, causing a stream of blood

to pour from Fitzsimmons' mouth. Corbett came in again with a vicious left on the jaw, and again the blood came in a stream from Fitz's mouth. The men then clinched. Corbett then put it all over Fitzsimmons, putting his right on the head, his left on the jaw, and then left and right on the jaw, crowding Fitzsimmons to the ropes. Fitzsimmons seemed unable to stop the blows that came in, and Corbett hit him on the jaw with his left and uppercut him with his right, making the blood fly. Bob's face was

politely a quivering mass. He was evidently beginning to weaken. Fitzsimmons attempted to reach Corbett's jaw, but failed, and the next second missed a hard right swing. Fitzsimmons was evidently tired, and when he received a second blow to the head he reeled and went down on one knee. Corbett was wild to finish him, and although the rule of the fight is that when one man is down the other should retire ten feet until the fallen man is on his feet, Corbett's eagerness ignored the rule and kept trying to get at Fitzsimmons.

Referee Siler warned him to stand back, and Martin Julian sprang upon the platform on the outside of the ropes, calling excitedly to Corbett: "Stand back and obey the rules; why don't you stand back?" Fitzsimmons was down seven seconds, but was only taking a rest. The instant he rose Corbett was at him like a fiend. He landed his right on Fitzsimmons' jaw, sent a hard left to the jaw, and put his left into Fitzsimmons' face with the force of a bullet, and then put his right on the jaw again. He followed these blows up with a left on the jaw and a right on the head, and a little more of it would have been his. His face was literally a mass of blood, and he tottered a little as he went to his corner. Corbett's chest was covered with blood which splattered from the mouth and nose of Fitzsimmons.

Round 3.—Fitzsimmons came up to the mark promptly, and seemed refreshed. Corbett began with a hook on the jaw, and then put in a right upper cut. He tapped Fitzsimmons' nose twice, and Fitzsimmons made a right and left swing on the jaw, and Jim planted a straight left jab on the nose again. Fitzsimmons led for the body and Corbett clinched. Fitzsimmons getting in a good right on the jaw, and then Corbett got in a light left on the body and Fitzsimmons clinched. Fitzsimmons put in a stiff left on the body, but received a hard jab in return, and then clinched to avoid a savage left hook. Both would have done the business for him had it landed. Corbett's thigh was dazed with the blood from his own glove, which was colored by contact with the nose and mouth of Fitzsimmons. Corbett came in for a second round, and the men were apparently being unable to stop the blows. He seemed to be waiting for his chance and willing to take blows if only he had a chance for a return. Fitzsimmons swung a right and left for the jaw, but Corbett ducked very neatly and gave Fitzsimmons a straight left jab that smeared the blood all over Fitzsimmons' face. Fitzsimmons put in a left body blow and ducked a left swing and clinched. After the breakaway Corbett assumed the offensive and put a stiff right on the body, Corbett clinching. Corbett struck for the body and landed below the belt, the blow, however, being very light, and Fitzsimmons paid no attention to it. Corbett then put his left on the jaw and getting away very cleverly from right and left hooks which Fitzsimmons sent at his jaw, he clinched. Corbett put his left in the face and uppercut savagely with his right, but Fitzsimmons slipped on one side and stopped the blows with his left elbow. At the close of the round both men were bespattered with blood, and Fitzsimmons was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin.

Round 4.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 5.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 6.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 7.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 8.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 9.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 10.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 11.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 12.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 13.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 14.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 15.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 16.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 17.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 18.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 19.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 20.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 21.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 22.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 23.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 24.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 25.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 26.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 27.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 28.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 29.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 30.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 31.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

landed a hard left on the chin. Jim ducked a vicious right hand swing and landed a right on the body, following it with a left on the body and another on the nose. Corbett led for the face, but touched lightly. Fitzsimmons followed Corbett up and landed a hard left on the jaw, getting a left on the jaw in return, but it only made him laugh. They then clinched. Fitzsimmons missed a left for the body and they clinched again. Fitzsimmons rushed, landing a left on the body and in a clinch punched Corbett on the body with his right. He also hit Corbett missed a right swing for the head in the breakaway and Fitzsimmons landed a hard right on the body, but missed a left for the body. Corbett landed right on the head and left on the body, followed with a left on the jaw. A clinch followed. Corbett landed a hard right on the jaw, and Fitzsimmons landed a hard left on the jaw. When the round closed, the men were clinched, both laughing. Fitzsimmons' body was red from the effects of Corbett's right hands.

Referee Siler said to the newspaper men that he didn't get in between the men during a clinch for fear that he might spoil a chance for a knockout with one arm free.

Round 3.—Corbett immediately landed a hard left on jaw. Fitzsimmons ran Corbett to the ropes and then clinched, no blows being struck. Corbett landed right on Fitzsimmons' jaw and left on neck. Corbett

landed right on Fitz's jaw. Both landed hard, and they clinched. Fitzsimmons followed up with a left on jaw and ducked a vicious left hand swing. Corbett missed a right on

body and they clinched. Jim missed a left hand swing, and Corbett landed left on jaw. A light left on the head and they clinched. Jim landed hard on the jaw and right on the head. He landed the left on jaw

again. Fitzsimmons hit Corbett hard on the head, staggering him. Corbett gave Fitzsimmons a hard left on the jaw, and then led again and missed.

Corbett landed his right on the body, a left on the ear, a light right on the jaw, and they clinched. Corbett landed his left on the jaw and right on the body, and the men clinched. Corbett landed a hard left on the jaw and Fitzsimmons

clinched, being a trifle dazed by the succession of blows he had received. Jim landed a right on the body, and then came in for a left on the jaw. Fitzsimmons landed on the head with left and got in a right hand jab on the body as the

round closed. Corbett seemed the fresher of the two. He got first blood, which was coming from Fitzsimmons' mouth as the round sounded. Jim refused refreshments, but Fitzsimmons

drank from a bottle. Round 2.—Both men opened with left on face and Corbett was crowded to the ropes. Fitzsimmons made a wild swing for the body and a second clinch followed. Corbett ducked from a vicious left intended for the jaw, and then put a hard right hand up on the chin, causing a stream of blood

to pour from Fitzsimmons' mouth. Corbett came in again with a vicious left on the jaw, and again the blood came in a stream from Fitz's mouth. The men then clinched. Corbett then put it all over Fitzsimmons, putting his right on the head, his left on the jaw, and then left and right on the jaw, crowding Fitzsimmons to the ropes. Fitzsimmons seemed unable to stop the blows that came in, and Corbett hit him on the jaw with his left and uppercut him with his right, making the blood fly. Bob's face was

politely a quivering mass. He was evidently beginning to weaken. Fitzsimmons attempted to reach Corbett's jaw, but failed, and the next second missed a hard right swing. Fitzsimmons was evidently tired, and when he received a second blow to the head he reeled and went down on one knee. Corbett was wild to finish him, and although the rule of the fight is that when one man is down the other should retire ten feet until the fallen man is on his feet, Corbett's eagerness ignored the rule and kept trying to get at Fitzsimmons.

Referee Siler warned him to stand back, and Martin Julian sprang upon the platform on the outside of the ropes, calling excitedly to Corbett: "Stand back and obey the rules; why don't you stand back?" Fitzsimmons was down seven seconds, but was only taking a rest. The instant he rose Corbett was at him like a fiend. He landed his right on Fitzsimmons' jaw, sent a hard left to the jaw, and put his left into Fitzsimmons' face with the force of a bullet, and then put his right on the jaw again. He followed these blows up with a left on the jaw and a right on the head, and a little more of it would have been his. His face was literally a mass of blood, and he tottered a little as he went to his corner. Corbett's chest was covered with blood which splattered from the mouth and nose of Fitzsimmons.

Round 3.—Fitzsimmons came up to the mark promptly, and seemed refreshed. Corbett began with a hook on the jaw, and then put in a right upper cut. He tapped Fitzsimmons' nose twice, and Fitzsimmons made a right and left swing on the jaw, and Jim planted a straight left jab on the nose again. Fitzsimmons led for the body and Corbett clinched. Fitzsimmons getting in a good right on the jaw, and then Corbett got in a light left on the body and Fitzsimmons clinched. Fitzsimmons put in a stiff left on the body, but received a hard jab in return, and then clinched to avoid a savage left hook. Both would have done the business for him had it landed. Corbett's thigh was dazed with the blood from his own glove, which was colored by contact with the nose and mouth of Fitzsimmons. Corbett came in for a second round, and the men were apparently being unable to stop the blows. He seemed to be waiting for his chance and willing to take blows if only he had a chance for a return. Fitzsimmons swung a right and left for the jaw, but Corbett ducked very neatly and gave Fitzsimmons a straight left jab that smeared the blood all over Fitzsimmons' face. Fitzsimmons put in a left body blow and ducked a left swing and clinched. After the breakaway Corbett assumed the offensive and put a stiff right on the body, Corbett clinching. Corbett struck for the body and landed below the belt, the blow, however, being very light, and Fitzsimmons paid no attention to it. Corbett then put his left on the jaw and getting away very cleverly from right and left hooks which Fitzsimmons sent at his jaw, he clinched. Corbett put his left in the face and uppercut savagely with his right, but Fitzsimmons slipped on one side and stopped the blows with his left elbow. At the close of the round both men were bespattered with blood, and Fitzsimmons was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin.

Round 4.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 5.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 6.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 7.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 8.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 9.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 10.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 11.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 12.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 13.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 14.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 15.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 16.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 17.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 18.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 19.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 20.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 21.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 22.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 23.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 24.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 25.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 26.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 27.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 28.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 29.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 30.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 31.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 32.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 33.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 34.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded him back into his corner. Corbett was a sight, his face being covered with blood from hair to chin. Round 35.—Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body. Fitzsimmons was evidently determined to have his inning, and he went after Corbett fast and furious. He sent a hard left on the body, hard left on the jaw, crowding Corbett to the ropes, and then a right straight across the body.

Round 36.—Fitzsimmons was evidently getting stronger, and came up in fine shape. He went at Corbett and crowded