THE POST OFFICE.

The report of the Postmaster General for the fiscal year, 1907-1908, was published recently. In his introductory remarks, Hon. Mr. Lemieux notes that the number of post offices has increased during the year by 446, postal notes offices by 446, money order offices by 199, and savings bank offices by 41. There has been an increase of 656 miles in the extent of the railway mail service, and the number of miles over which mails have been carried by all routes was 1,129,779 miles greater than in the previous year. It is estimated that slightly over 8 per cent. more letters and postal cards were carried during the year than in 1907. This increase represented $4,887,000. Naturally there has been an increase in expenditure due to the extension of service; this increase amounts to $7,448,442, but in spite of this the operations show a surplus of $1,101,826.64. During the year several changes came into effect, reducing the rates of postage to various countries and removing certain restrictions regarding postal cards. Free letter delivery was put in operation in thirteen towns, seven of these being in Ontario, three in Quebec, two in Alberta, and one each in Manitoba and Prince Edward Island. The numbers of letters and postal cards carried in the different provinces was as follows:—

Ontario	221,115,000
Quebec	87,589,000
Nova Scotia	27,116,000
New Brunswick	17,500,000
P. E. Island	3,236,000
British Columbia	2,242,000
Manitoba	2,749,000
Alberta	14,987,000
Saskatchewan	16,419,000
Yukon	76,000

It would appear from the total that the Western provinces have the letter writing habit, and that the number of letters is not always proportionate to the population. The total number of post offices in operation on March 31, 1908, was 11,828, an increase of 232 in ten years. The total amount of money remitted by money orders and postal notes amounted to $55,284,954.41, an increase of $7,000,000 over the previous year. In the period covered by the report, there were letters in the dead letter branch of the department a total of 292,786 letters, or packets originating in Canada, and 1,212,055 letters or packets received from Canadian post offices. In the post office savings bank the balance to the credit of the depositors on March 31, 1908, was $47,564,342, which was an increase of $11,438,553 over the balance on the corresponding date of the previous year.

A NATIONAL THEATRE.
The proposal to establish a National Theatre in Great Britain as a memorial to Shakespeare will be marked by the approbation of every person who speaks the English language. No one writer has done so much for English literature and none is held in such esteem and reverence as the bard of Avon.

It is a matter for surprise that some fitting tribute to his memory is not already in existence. None could be found more entirely suitable than a theatre built by the public where the best plays can be presented with an eye to art instead of to finance.

Apart from the fact that it will form a splendid monument to England's greatest poet, the project deserves popular support on its own merits. In establishing a national theatre Great Britain is following a precedent set long ago by other European nations which have found such institutions both popular and beneficial. No other art has become so commercialized in English speaking countries as has the drama. The modern standard set for the production of plays makes a large investment necessary before a place can be given its first public performance and managers are not generally sufficiently philanthropic to select a play entirely on the grounds of its artistic excellence. While efforts to elevate the stage above the popular demand meet with little success, yet there is a chance that the management do not give the public credit for as much good taste as they possess. Whether the popular standard is high or not there are many who do appreciate the best. A theatre conducted for the public benefit may not pay. Neither does a university, but no one suggests that we should do without our colleges on that account. A national theatre should be a great educational institution and there is every reason to believe that it should prove of value to the community supporting it. There are many difficulties in the way of carrying such a proposal to success and its progress in England will be watched with interest.

SHE DID.
Whin back to the Old Sod me day dreams are wingin'.
Sure Kathleen Mavourneen's the song 'll be singin'.
But more often me thoughts, the truth to be tellin'.
Wild a nearer Kathleen an' dearer, are dwellin'.
One's known all the homes o' the poor an' the rich in the land.
But my mavourneen is the Queen o' the Kitchen.
Wild the two of us waitin', slavin' an' savin'.
Faith 'twill not be long till that name she'll be layin'.
An' faith 'tis her swate self is nadin', God bless her,
Some more of a man than a Father Confessor!
An' faith 'tis meself an' no other is waitin' to confession.
The colleen's stayed home whin she wint to confession.
The day before Bridget O'Flaherty's party.
Some bit of a sn she tells Father McCarthy.
"For your fault," then says he "Which God knows for glarin'."
Ten days twinty beens in each shoe you'll be wearin'.
"Sure the praste—spake wile the reverence due him,
An' little it is, may the bad scan be to him!"
Says to the colleen, "ain't fit to lie dead on!"
The same ground at all your dartin' feet tread on!"
"O Kathleen, acushla, ye'll never be thinkin' O' doin' this penance at all for it's drivin'!"
The good father's been, ayther time or he's crazy."
"Ochone!" But he said it," says she, so aye.
"Ye musn't be hard wid dear Father McCarthy.
But sorta the bit can I go to the party."
An' there's the new gown as I've just finished makin'!"
"Ahaaaga," says I, "'tis me heart you are breakin'!"
"Althoug' I'm no praste, I'll absolve ye," I told 'em.
Me arm 'round her waist an' her head on me shoulder:

FORGETTING TO FORGET.
Oh, sad was the fate of the Croesus of old.
Who thoughtlessly told all he knew;
He sat far away in a sorrowful state
And his frown was distressing to view.
"Pray tell us why you are so pen-sive," they said,
"What memories and come to fret?"
"I'm thinking," he sighed, with a shake of his head,
"Of the things I forget to forget!"
"They tell me, with tears, how the far-away years
Hold fond recollections and sad.
But with an intelligence train, it appears,
Your feelings need not be so bad.
And it's due to my own inattention that now
My mind is with trouble beset.
They are tracing deep wrinkles of care in my brow,
The things I forget to forget!"

The barber, after the usual flow of conversation, completed the job, and turning to his customer, asked: "Who thoughtlessly told all he knew; He sat far away in a sorrowful state And his frown was distressing to view."

WANTED TO MAKE SURE.
A number of students from a German university were drinking in a beer garden. A self-satisfied looking American said to one of the shortest and stoutest Dutchmen:
"I'll bet you five dollars you can't drink seven schooners of beer."
The Dutchman hesitated, then declined the bet, and left the room. In ten minutes he came puffing back, hurled up to the American and exclaimed:
"I'll vili dake der bet!"
The beer was ordered and the Dutchman in the presence of an admiring and envious company, quickly drank off the seven schooners.
The five dollars were paid over and the American asked:
"Would you mind telling me why you went out before you took the bet?"
"Nein; to see could I drink der seven schooners, what!"

HIS TEACHINGS WERE GROSSLY IMMORAL
And Father of Pupil Sued for Damages.

Anti-Religious, Anti-Patriotic and Immoral Doctrine Unfit for Publication, Included in Curriculum.

PARIS, Jan. 15.—The Dijon court of Appeal has just given decision in a case which has created extraordinary interest in the district. A teacher of the local communal school, named Morisset, was proceeded against by M. Girodet, father of one of the pupils, for having in his curriculum of instruction, given utterance to anti-religious, anti-patriotic, and grossly immoral teachings.

The defendant, in addressing his pupils during school hours, is said to have described the French army as a band of ruffians, to have contended that the Germans were right in killing off during the war in 1870, French infants in their cradles, and to have characterized those who believed in God as being little better than fools, adding that the only true God was a well-filled purse. Morisset's doctrine on the moral question is unfit for publication.

The injured father first thought to have this amoral teacher of the young punished by administrative chiefs, but the authorities of Public Instruction turned a deaf ear to his demand for redress, and he thereupon decided to take legal proceedings. M. Girodet thereupon entered an action, claiming $400 by way of moral and material damages for the wrong done to his son, a lad of tender years, by this pernicious teaching.

The tribunal which heard the case showed itself unsympathetic. In an eloquent speech the Advocate replying to the Minister of Justice, warned the court of the danger which might result if what he termed "reactionary parents" were allowed to interfere with the teaching given in French schools. The court decided that it was incompetent to hear the action, and the defendant was ordered to pay costs.

An appeal was lodged, and again the father was beaten, but at last, in desperation, he took his case before the Tribunal des Conflicts. This body, after ordering an inquiry with a view to ascertaining if the charges were well founded, sent the case back to the court of Appeal, with order to adjudicate upon it.

The court found the charges proved, but reduced the damages to $40 and costs. The president refused to order the insertion of the judgment in the newspapers, on the ground that it would be giving to the offence a special aspect which it did not deserve.

RIVAL MOST MYSTERIOUS DETECTIVE STORIES
Valuable Ring Disappeared From Operating Room as if by Magic.

BREST, Jan. 15.—A sensation has been caused here by the mysterious disappearance from a local surgery of a ring of great value belonging to the German Marquis Wilhelm von Braun. The marquis, who is a lieutenant in the reserve of the artillery of the Guard in the German army, was arrested here a short time ago, and after being kept in prison a week has been released on bail. The next day he attempted to commit suicide by shooting himself in the head. He was taken to the surgery of Dr. Lafolle. It was here that occurred the mysterious loss of his ring. This was made of platinum, with a bezel of the same metal on which were engraved the arms of the owner. It had been chased by an Austrian jeweller, and is stated to be a unique model.

Suddenly the telephone bell rang. The doctor picked up the box containing the jewelry and, followed by the police commissioner, ran to the telephone in an adjoining room. He laid down the box close to the clock picked it up again and returned to the operating room. The marquis's lawyer, M. de Rivecourt, who is mayor of a commune near Brest, then asked the doctor to place also in the jewel box the scarf pin of his client. It was then noticed with amazement that the platinum ring had disappeared.

The rooms were carefully searched, but no trace of the ring could be found. The doctor ransacked the trunk of his resident patient, but with no success, and then he formally handed over the investigation to the police commissioner. A magician or a conjuror could not have done the thing better. This mysterious affair is a second edition of

RAISULI HAS HAD HIS LONG LOCKS SHORN
On Fulfillment of Vow of Vengeance.

A Present of $400,000 Smoothed His Way to Power and Revenge.

TANGHER, Jan. 15.—From Fez come reports of a curious and imposing ceremony which has taken place at the great mosque of Nuley Drik, the patron of the town, Raisuli, the notorious ex-brigand, has had his hair cut, and has offered his shorn locks to the saint of Fez. It is long years since the shears and Raisuli's head made acquaintance with each other. When his misdeeds, he was imprisoned by his enemy, Abd-el-Sadek, governor of Tangier, he swore by the holy patron of Fez that he would never cut his hair until he had had revenge. For seven years, loaded with fetters, he languished in the dark prison of Mogador, and the iron entered into his soul.

After his liberation, when he obtained the post of governor of Kabylie, outside Tangier, he thought he would be able to rid himself of his flowing locks, which were becoming a burden to him, but he had still powerful enemies at the court of Fez, and he had to postpone the ceremony. Now, however, events have permitted him to redeem his oath, as he has acquired influence with Mulley Haddi, and the friendly of Abd-el-Sadek, who were zealous partisans of Abd-el-aziz, are in the shade. One of them was until lately governor of Tangier, but he has now been dismissed thanks to the intrigues of Raisuli, whose revenge was thus completed.

The struggles between the two were interesting while it lasted. The governor of Tangier, bearing that Raisuli had been nominated to his former position, sacrificed sheep before the doors of the Legation to prevent the confirmation of the appointment. He also sent a large present of money to the Sultan, but Raisuli went on better with the Sultan. He had the respectable sum of $400,000. The Sultan kept both presents, but decided in favor of the ex-brigand, who accordingly thought that the time for sacrificing his chevrons had arrived.

He reported to the mosque, and the imposing ceremony was witnessed by his numerous admirers. His hair, which in the course of twelve years, had attained a length of about half a yard, was duly shorn, but Raisuli preserved a small portion of it for himself. It is stated that he will renounce the British protection, which was formerly of such value to him.
