THE ITALIAN DOCTOR'S TALE.

Fifty-five years ago the "Divine Sontag" stood upon the boards of La Scala. It was a night of wondrous triumph for the Milanese; for long had the battle raged and desperate between the operatic powers of Rome, Naples, and Milan, ere the palm of victory had been awarded to the latter.

My professional duties had detained me late (I was a young, struggling M. D. at the time); and I entered the theatre, but as the air shook with the wondrous applause elicited by Sontag's rendering of Ah, Non Credea, in the "Somnambula," I was especially disappointed to have missed that aria—to me the gem of the entire opera. But who could deem himself ill-used, if in time for the Guaurer: so, mentally thankful it was no worse, I made my way to my seat—one, fortunately, very near the stage; and had taken it, and was bowing to some English friends seated in the boxes adjacent, ere the wild tumult of applause had ceased to deafen my ears, or the floral tributes to be enthusiastically showered at the lady's feet.

One wreath, remarkable for its singular beauty, I remember, composed of some deftly woven, strange, red exotics, caught my gaze as I turned toward the stage, in the act of its descent. An instant more, it caught my hand as well; for, unintentionally, in the act of turning, hat in hand, the latter struck it, thereby swerving it from its original destination, directly into my own grasp. A moment more, I stood the centre of attraction in my immediate sphere, bending forward with what grace I might, offering it to Sontag. The kindly, gracious smile with which she received it will probably dwell in my memory as long as aught earthly. Verily, its remembrance thrills me with a strange sense of pleasure, even upon a fifty-year's recall.

The graceful figure, in its slender beauty, yet bent before me, the crimson wreath lightly resting against her breast, when a second one, dropped lightly from above and literally crowned Amena as she stood. It was a deft trick, and one which immediately called forth the delighted appreciation of the audience.

The building absolutely rocked with the vibration caused by the second burst of ecstatic acclamation.

One odd feature of the incident immediately struck me—namely, that the second wreath upon the prima donna's head was an exact duplicate of the blood-red crown upon her bosom, and which I had presumed not an instant before. I had scarcely had time to note this coincidence, and the lady, casting her hurried eyes appreciatively in my direction, was in the act of bowing a second graceful obeisance to the compliment-wreath, raising it as she did so to her lips, when her beautiful face paled suddenly, the limbs contracted sharply, and she fell writhing in convulsions, almost into the very footlights, at my feet!

In an hour the mystery was out, and all Milan knew that both wreaths were poisoned! To this day the music mad Milanese remember the dreary horror of that night. A week later, Europe learned it; and at this day it is the property of the world. The facts were these:—A jealous rival, distanced alike in love as in song by the peerless favorite, interpolated the role of Borgia into the opera. Providentially, with but partial success.

A week later, Sontag, perfectly recovered, sang at the San Carlo; and a month had barely elapsed ere the echoes of La Scala again awoke to her divine forgiveness.

A sudden case of suicide again called me from my bed, immediately upon my retirement, the night of the "Floral Murder," as we of Milan dubbed the abortive catastrophe. My patient was a young and beautiful woman—a singer,—one of Millan's favourites prior to the arrival of the present idol. Its cause, a dual one—envy and malice, rooted in maddening jealousy.

By a marvelous interposition, death was not the immediate result; my patient lingered on for hours—nay, days—three, and even four, in number—actually passed in life by a woman literally stabbed through the heart!

I had, of course, forbidden the slightest possible excitement. Life, of course, was utterly hopeless; but life should be saved as long, I determined, as human skill could fan the vital spark. All Milan, professional, was in attendance; but I, having received the earliest call, was considered the ruling medical authority. It was on the afternoon of the fourth day, as I was hurrying from other calls back into this wondrous patient's room, that I was arrested by such strains of entrancing melody, that with my hand upon the door-knob, in the act of hurrying out, I paused to listen.

"Oh! it is the glorious Sontag!" was my first thought.

A friend passing at the moment (for I lodged in the same hotel with both prima donnas), drawn from his sofa like myself into the corridor by the concord of these wondrous sweet sounds, nodded back appreciation, recognition.

"Of course it is Sontag?" I said.

"No; that is the strangest part of it. Signora Sontag is listening with the rest, utterly entranced, within the corridor."

"What?" I amazedly answered—and with the word sprang into the passage. Once out there, one glance told me all—the crowd gathered around the door of my patient's room, and it was from the door that this world of melody was pouring. In an instant I was beside her, about to forcibly prevent the certain death, if possible; but I saw I was already too late. A strange smile lit up her wasted face, and the large eyes kindled into an unearthly transient glare of life as they met mine; then pointing to a tiny envelope upon the table beside her, with one loud, triumphant burst of inexpressibly sad melody, she raised herself suddenly to her full hight in bed, stretched forth her arms wildly, and with a choking, gurgling rattle of the throat, fell forward upon her, literally deluged in her own life-blood.

The note, directed simply to me, contained these words in a slender, Italian hand:

"Doctor, you say I cannot live—and I know it. My prayer is for one more song in life—and that she may hear it. I pay the price knowingly—and only too willingly—Life for a single song!"

She had verily paid it. An examination of the poor girl's effects showed her to have died in extreme poverty. She might have been wealthy in former times; but her recklessness and sad extravagance had long since passed into a proverb among those who knew her best.

That evening, while watching in the dim twilight of the room wherein she laid, a tall figure of a woman, shrouded to the temples, glided noiselessly beside me. Without a word, I felt a purse pressed into my hand, and in an instant after the mystery disappeared as noiselessly as a shadow into the echoes of the darkened corridor. A slip of paper was twisted in tremulous handwriting about it, on which was simply:—"In masses, Signor, for her soul."

VINEGAR BITTERS

Grateful Thousands proclaim VINEGAR BITTERS the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained the sinking system.

No Person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and vital organs wasted beyond repair.

Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, which are so prevalent in the valleys of our great rivers throughout the United States, especially those of the Mississippi, Ohio, Missouri, Illinois, Tennessee, Cumberland, Arkansas, Red, Colorado, Brazos, Rio Grande, Pearl, Alabama, Mobile, Savannah, Roanoke, James, and many others, with their vast tributaries, throughout our entire country during the Summer and Autumn, and remarkably so during seasons of unusual heat and dryness, are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach and liver, and other abdominal viscera. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these various organs, is essentially necessary. There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to DR. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as they will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus fore-armed.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Month, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia. One bottle will prove a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Scrofula, or King's Evil, White Swellings, Ulcers, Erysipelas, Swelled Neck, Goitre, Scrofulous Inflammations, Indolent Inflammations, Mercurial Affections, Old Sores, Eruptions of the Skin, Sore Eyes, etc. In these, as in all other constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS have shown their great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have no equal. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take a dose of WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS occasionally.

For Skin Diseases, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt-Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters.

Pin, Tape, and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics will free the system from worms like these Bitters.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters display so decided an influence that improvement is soon perceptible.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions, or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.
