"Weigh your words," said a man to a fellow who was blustering away in a towering passion at another. "They won't weigh much if he does," said the antagonist, coolly.

"But I pass," said a minister a few Sundays ago in dismissing one theme of his subject to take up another. "Then I make it spades!" yelled a man from the gallery who was dreaming the happy hours away in a game of euchre. It is needless to say that he went out on the next deal, being assisted by one of the deacons with a handful of clubs.

Judge Kelly always most candidly ada handful of clubs.

Judge Kelly always most candidly admitted his legal mistakes. On one occasion Counsellor Johnson pressed him very earnestly for a decision in his favor, urging the absence of all doubt upon the case, because his lordship had decided the same points the same way twice before, "So, Mr. Johnson," said the judge, looking archly, shifting his seat somewhat, and shrugging up his right shoulder—"so, because I decided wrong twice, Mr. Johnson, you'd have me do so a third time? No, no, Mr. Johnson, you must excuse me. I'll decide the other way this bout." And so he did.

HE WAS TAKEN TO AN HOSPITAL.

He said it was a private matter on which he wished to speak to the editor, and no one else would do. He was well dressed, and looked at the machinery and the various other interesting sights in a printing-house. Presently he was ushered into the editorial sanctum very cordially, the edi-tor naturally supposing him to be some big gun. The visitor took off his silk hat, big gun. The visitor took off his silk hat, wiped his forehead, and, sitting down, began to relate his business.

"You see," said he, "I take a great interest in the Indian question; and, as you are an editor, I would like you to give my ideas publicity. Now I've studied and sifted this matter from top to bottom, and, since we must get rid of the Indians, the only way is to build railroads all over the West."

West."
"You don't say so?" chimed in the ed.
"Yes, sir." he continued. "It has been demonstrated by actual experiment. A friend of mine who used to run a locomotive on the Vandelia went out West, and while running a train in a wild secand while running a train in a wind section of that country the Indians slew him; but do you know they could never get an ingin-near there since?"

That man never went down those steps again, and there was only one window leading from the second story.—Exchange.

"Why this—this is a serenade," ex-claimed Bilkins.

"Exactly; so I see. Now, suppose I were to stand the beer and car-fare all round, would you go out in the suburbs somewhere and work off the rest of it in front of some deaf and dumb asylum or "Do you charge me double fare because I

"I give you one-quartar of a minute to pay your fare!" said the conductor, as he reached for the bell-rope. "I'll pay," replied the man, after a few seconds—"I'll pay now, and sue the com-pany when we reach Detroit. I'll have to pany when we reach Detroit. I'll have to pay you in silver-bars, as I am short of gold coin and greenbacks."

He fished up his old satchel, took about four minutes to unlock it, and after a diverand a scramble he fished up two old paper collars, the remains of a shoe-brush, and an old darning needle threaded with a feet or two of string.

Young Bilkins went to serenade his girl on Van Ness Avenue. The amateur orchestra, of which he is a member, had hardly squelched out the first two bars of "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," when the second-story window went up, and old Bogg's, Amelia's father, stuck his head out and remarked:

"Is there no way of compromising this thing!"

"What—w—what?" gasped Bilkins.

"I say, can't we make some arrangement to get out of this matter. How does $4 and an old gas-stove strike you!"

"Why +this—this is a serenade," exclaimed Bilkins.

"Come down here and say that, like a man," roared the big-drum, who was full off Budweiser and fury. "You bald-headed old pelican, come down."
"I—I—think we had better—better go, as it were, boys," muttered the mortified Bilkins, and the disgusted band walked sadly off, scornfully ignoring Bogg's parting injunctions to reform and lead better lives, after the thing blew over.

Louisville Courier-Journal.

There were some mad men in a certain Kentucky post-office a few days ago. A postal card wes dropped into the letter-box addressed to the "Rev. John Penobscoti, "It was an ordinary postmaster. He took it up, glanced at the address, turned it leisurely over, and read: ——, May 2, 1879.—You, to "home this card is not addressed, and who, nevertheless, have the check to read it, are a contemptible, unprincipled sneak, and a prying pusillamimous coward.

The postmaster laid the card gently down, and lounged to the other end of the house, softly whistling "Nancy Lee." In due time the clerk came upon the card, perused it, and made the neighborhood hideous with the howls of his pet dog, which he kicked in the ribs. How the card fared with the various route agents through whom it passed it is impossible to say, nor do we know whether it was reaby the woman who is postmistress of the office where the Rev. John Penobscot is supposed to get his mail; but the report is that on the day it reached there she smashed a bottle of ink on her husband's head, spanked the children all round, and chewed up 95 cents' worth of wax. We cannot be too careful never to write on postal cards anything in the least calculated to wound the sensative delicacy of the post-office people's feelings.
