hat, the Wolsey hat, that has survived to the nineteenth century, like Landor's shell, "remembers its august abodes," and by the renewed blood-red freshness of its color, and the sudden arrogance of its cock, evidently hopes to become a Wiseman in the present generation.—Pench.

SHARDPER AND CARDIFAL WISEMAN.—We join in the hope, and look forward to the issue of the struggle with confidence, because we know that the vast majority of the people of England are as firmly opposed to the iscursions of Rome as were their marryred foreightes. The Protestant feeling of the country will soon be roused, and we had a striking proof in our town on Tuesdey night, that it is by no means dormant at present. Mrs. Panny Kemble was reading the fine historical play of King John, when she came to the reply of the Monarch to the Romiah Cardinal:

Thou can'st not, Cardinal, devise a name

The last lines drew forth a lorg and spontaneous cheer, which amply proved two things—that the language of Shakspere is fitted for all ages, and, that resistance to the tyranny of Rome exists, as an innate principle, in the minds of Englishmen. Cheltenham Journal.

an innate principle, in the minds of Englishmen. Chiltenian Journal.

Movement in the Church.—We wish to prepare the public for some very extraordinary and exciting work in the Church of England before many weeks have elapsed. If our information be correct—and we have every reason to believe it is—certain Bishops have received hints, which admit of no mistake, and from a quarter which they dare not disregard, to the effect that they must forthwith adopt the necessary steps to rid their respective Dioceses of certain Clerical gentlemen whose Romish tendencies are so noto-thouse with the commission of the Right Reverend Prelatesta Wildling difficulty of the Right Reverend Prelatesta Wildlings we allude consists in this—that they have hitherto been the bosom friends and apschal patrons of these Puseyite Clergymen. It must necessarily de giological to their feolings, either to eject these men from their livings, or enforce perfect conformity in doctaine and ceremonies to the requirements of the Church. How, for example, can the Bishop of London proceed to expel the Rev. Mr. Bennett, the chief Romaniser among the Metropolitan Clergy, after having, so interes June last, eulogised him as his particular friend, and as the very model of an Anglical Clergymas? That will be a point for the special consideration of Dr. Blomfield himself; and when it comes, as come it must, that he ways traved to the circular of Mr. Bennett, the of the special comes, as come it must, that he self; and when it comes, as come it must, that me must proceed to the ejection of Mr. Bennett, the Right Rev. Prelate will have this conclusion—that he is only adding one more to a long catalogue of previous inconsistencies. But, whatever may be his feelings, or those of other Puseyite Prelates similarly circumstanced, there must be a clearance of these Rev. Romanists. Indeed, we may add that should there be any hesitation on the part of the Bishops, in acting in accordance with the intensal made to them, they will probably soon discover that means will be devised to get rid of themselves.—Marning Advertiser.

A Minacle IW Parried—A Living Bear destroyed by a Dead Scient.—The Priesthood of France are determined not to be behind the rest of the world in minacles; but the manner in which they seek to increase the number of the faithful is more interesting and romantic than the winking Virgins of more clumby confrivers. They are assiduously promulgating a story of the destruction of a monatrously big Bruin by the ghost of St. Bruno. A huge and ferpoious bear has long apread terror amone the peasantry of the Chartrense Dessert, and devastation among their cattle—When the snows appeared dast month, the Brute became particularly impudent. One might the child of a woodman belonging to the Monastery of St. Bruno was taken ill. The father set out in the dead of the night to the Monastery, and obtained from one of the fathers a bottle of Medicine, with which, after a hasty prayer to the Virgin for the usfety of hie darling, he returned towards his but in the midst of a raging tempest. He cared little for the storm, however, but he terribly feared the ferceious bear. He had to cross a ravine over the trunk of a tree, and just as he had reached the middle of the narrow bridge, on which it was impossible to turn, he saw the big bear writh gnashing teeth awaiting his arrival. The torrent reared helow, and the poor man expected nothing but death. In his extremity he srayed to St. Bruno; a light appeared, that saint stood heside the bear, handed the poor man safely amone, at the same time deahing the bear into the ravine, where its body was found next moming. The child recovered, and the woodman reliable. The minacle to the fathers, and returned thanks for his preservation. The skin of the bear is exhibited in Paris, and sermons have been preached on the woodrous event.—Deally Messe.

The doctrines which Mr. Merritt has teen preat hing turough the country for some years, are distinctly set forth, and warmly applauded; particularly he total repeal of all Customs Du ies; the une ntrolled management of our own affairs; the abolition of the expanses of Criminel Justice; and the maint nance of British Connexion, so long as it may be the interest of Canada to preserve it. No doubt Shemstone did the amiable to the Minister in a very conspicuous manner—in requital of some favor more substantial, I believe, than a that of having Esquire added to his name.
