SPORT IN WARTIME.

ting Aircrafts Better Than Game Hunting.

Like every other branch of the service "Archie" (the anti-aircraft gun) is manned by a cheerful young band of warriors who swear that band of warriors who swear that their game has no equal in the whole of France. Their theory, however, is supported by the opinions of many big game hunters, who admit that for sheer sport they are hopelessly outclassed when it comes to potting at Hun planes, and also that the fascination of firing with a 13-pounder cannot be compared with that of a 450-500 H.V. double-barreled rife.
