Rationing the Sow.

Rationing the sow is the surest way to forestall trouble. Overfeeding at farrowing time makes her feverish and nervous; more likely to trample her offspring and less able, often, to secrete milk properly.

Don't feed the sow at all during the twenty-four hours before farrowing, and during the week prior to that keep corn out of the ration.
Corn is an especially heating feed.
Instead, feed ground oats, barley or bran, any one or two of these, or all three if you like.

And don't feed the sow at all for from twelve to eighteen hours after farrowing. After that, even, go slow, taking from a week to ten days to get the animal back on full feed.

Scours in young pigs is one of the troublesome conditions which arise from faulty feeding of the mother. Next in importance to rationing comes condition of the pen. Clean, dry pens do much to prevent digestive disorders and rheumatism in both the sow and the pigs.

Warts on Horses.

Warts are very difficult to eradicate, especially situated near the mouth or eyes. The exact cause of such growths is unknown, but no doubt indicates abnormal nutrition of the affected skin. Irritation of the skin may be a contributory cause.
The warts with small necks can be twisted off or barked with a silk thread, when they will drop off.
Masses of small warts will disappear in time if smothered daily with a thick paste of equal quantities of cold-pressed castor oil, salt and flowers of sulphur.
