Alex Gibson Fea is reported as buywork of the United Presbyterian Church. Fifty years ago the work was begun, and on a very small scale. The amount raised during the first year did not exceed £1.000, while it was gravely debated in Synod whether the Church would be justified in venturing so far as to send three missionaries to Canada. Twenty years from the start this missionary income had risen to £12,000; other ten years brought it up to £15,000; other ten to double that amount, while last year the revenue from all sources reached the start that you know nothing about; you get discouraged spending money with but little success.
