SAUCE FOR THE GOOSE.—The British have exactly the same right to the whole of the Atlantic fisheries of British North American that the American Government have to the whole of the Pacific sealing grounds west of Alaska. While the Americans have been complaining because the British insist upon exercising territorial rights over waters within three miles of a line drawn from headland to headland, their government has been cooly of a line drawn from headland to headland, their government has been cooly seizing British vessels which were hundreds of miles from land in Behring sea. After some pretty vigorous protests the American government have released the British vessels, discharged the prisoners and are now settling a claim for $150,000 damages. The United States is under contract with a fur company to protect these grounds against invasion by the vessels of other nations, and it now finds that it is unable to do so. Since the question of the Alaskan fisheries came up, the American press, like the American be given to discuss it when the Zulu estimates were brought up for debate. Notwithstanding the severe and protracted winter and the many predictions of a very late spring, we are in good time enjoying excellent seeding weather. The farmers are hard at work sowing and planting, and while but a few weeks ago there was nothing but snow and ice to be seen now it is so dry that fires are being kindled by sparks from the engines. Today quite a piece of fence was burned between Weldford station and Mortinger crossing, and at several other places along the line, much difficulty was experienced in saving sleepers piled along the roadside.

The council, whose duty directed the police committee of their body to give the proper instruction to the guardians of the law. The committee, not caring to take the responsibility, did nothing. Being pressed by the temperance people, the Council gave a hearing to the representatives of the Scott Act and the Anti-Scott Act parties. The Antiscalim that an old law has been made perpetual in its operation, and that it can be repeated by no new legislation. This is a few idea in law.
