"The King's visits abroad," he added, "have been exceedingly valuable to the foreign policy of this country. They have been specially valuable for the reason that the King in his own person has a special gift, which I believe has never been exceeded, of conveying to the Government and people of the coun-try to which he goes the impression of the good disposition and good-will of this country towards them. It is a great national asset that our Sovereign by his presence in foreign capitals should have contributed so much to smooth relations between ourselves and neighboring countries.
