VISIT TO A PRIGATE OF THE BALTIC FILTER. It is a strange sight to inspect a frigate ready for see, and to contrast with the or-der which prevails in every department the multiplicity of occupations which are being charted on. In one spot is the carpenter's shop, replets with tools of every descrip-tion, and by its side sawyers are at work over their saw-pit, as though they were about to erect some substantial edifice on shore. There, again, are rope-makers bu-sily engaged at their occupation; and, be-cause two hands are not sufficient, they are holding a third yarn in their teeth. At a huge cooking apparents on the main deck, cause two hands are not atilicient, idea, 60° holding a third yarn in their teeth. At a huge cooking apparatus on the main deck, soup and beef and vegetables are boiling for a crew of 530 men; there are sheep in the pens, and fowls in their cages, feeding as peaceably and quietly as though they were on shore, instead of between two long rows of 52°s diversified by a few 68-pounders. Sailmakers are at work, too; and neither the navigation of the Baltic nor the recep-tion of the "Rooshams" appear to mar the jolity sr harmony of the crew and marines as they eat their mess and sip their grog. You walk to one end of the main deck, and a chart shows you the position of every man in the ship. There are the fourteen men to every guis; there is a long train of men, who hand the, powder from one to another, and to the men at the guns; there are-boarding parties, and there are those who attend on the would be? others who carry shell, hest red-hot shot, or guard the mag-zine; each and all have their alloted place in the work of destruction; but the crew hoed it not, and every one appears light-hearted as though he were starting on a summer excursion. But there is a comething more than light-heartedness and activity which arrests the attention of a visitor. On each side of the upper deck, ranked in deadly order, black and polished are thirty-two's, and the four sixty-eights; at the bow is the long swivel gun, traversing any di-rection, and capable of sweeping at any point within a semi-circle of more than a mile radius; and there are, two, the brass cannonides for the ship's boats. point within a semi-circle of more than a mile radius; and there are, two, the brass cannonades for the ship's boats. In every possible place between the guns are racks filled with shot greased and shining; and there are red, dull, rusty-looking hollow shot; and there are furnaces for heating balls, and huge tongs for taking them from the fire and conveying them to the muzzles of the gun. On the main deck there is again the same array of guns along each side; four sixty-eights are in the centre, and they are flanked on each side by thirty-two's. On racks over head are the sponges and other utensils, rammers for charging the guns, short pistols, bright poleaxes, sharp cutasses, shells in small square box-es, strapped with iron bars, piles of mus-kets, boarding pikes, and piles of shot in every direction. Descend another stage, and you are in the midst of stores of all kinds. Here is biscuit for six months for more than 500 men, barrels of pork and beef and puncheons of rum out of number. There are other stores, in which you may liavally find everything from a medie to an more than 300 men, barrets of pork and beef and puncheons of rum out of number. There are other stores, in which you may literally find everything from a needle to an anchor; yarns and twine, and ropes by miles, spare muscles, spare cutlasses, spare pistols, spare something of everything. Another stage, you are below water level, and amid the levers and cranks, and pistons of the collossal engines; another descent, and you are in the furnace room, where light and ventilation reach you by a shaft, some forty or fifty feet above on deck. Pass through "errow alley"—a long low, dark passage, half the length of the ship— and a massive iron shaft some 100 feet long is revolving with furious velocity, to which were the screw attached, the whole mass __3247 tons, 586 men, 51 guns, with all the provisions and stores—would be propelled through the water without wind or sail, at the rate of more than a mile in five minutes. n a mile in five minutes te of more the the r Morning Chronicle.

Canton, who was killed in an encounter with a bear on Monday, last. It appears that about noon on that day, a bear, which for some time had been observed prowling about the neighbourhood, having attempted to devour one of his cows, the unfortunate decensed set out in pursuit of the savage monster; and at about 7 o'clock in the evening a report of a gun, oridently dis-charged at a great distance off was heard. His absence after this having excited some uncasiness in the minds of his friends, a party of them went is search of him, and on the following day discovered his dead body, in such a state as indicated that after a severe atruggle, he had fallen a prey to the attack of his ferocious destroyer. His discus were completely disfigured, and his gun, broken in pieces, was picked up olose by. LAKE SUPERIOR SILVER .--- The Detroit LARE SUPERIOR SILVER.—The Defroit Tribune says it learns, from undoubted au-thority, that the Minnesota Copper Compa-ny have recently, at a single blast blown out eight thousand dollars worth of pure sa-tive silver. We have conversed, adds the Tribune, with gentlemen who have seen some of the specimens, and others who have just returned from the mine, and they assure us that there is no humbug either as to the amount, or the quality of the ore. Lake Superior bids fair, to be as rich in silver mines as it is known to be in copper and iron. iron.

AN ANCIENT BOOK.—The oldest book in the United States, it is said, is a manu-script Bible in the possession of Dr. Wither-spoon of Alabama, written over a thousand years ago? He describes it as follows:— "The book is strongly bound in boards of the old English oak, and with thongs, by which the leaves are also well bound to-cether. The leaves are activaly made of gether. The leaves are entirely made of parchment, of a most superior quality of fineness and smoothness, little inferior to the fineness and smoothness, little inferior to the best satin. The pages are all ruled with great accuracy, and written with great uni-formity and beauty, in the old German text hand, and divided off into chapters and verses. The first chapter of every book in the Bible is written with a large capital of inimitable beauty, and splendidly illuminated with red, blue, and black ink, still in vivid colours; and no two of the capital letters in the book are precisely alike."

TIE CHRISTIAN WIFE.—Cheateaubriand discourses beautifully on this theme:— 'Man in uniting himself to her, regains a part of his substance; his soul, as well as his body, is incomplete without his wife he has strength, she has beauty; he labours in the field; he does not understand the details of domestic life, but his companion prepares the repast, and her smiles sweet-en existence.—He has his croases and the partner of his couch is there to soften them; his day may be sad and troubled, but in the chaste arms of his wife he finds comfort and repose.—Without woman man would be rude, gross and solitary. Woman spreads around him the flowers of existence, as the creeperio of the forest decorate the majes-tic oak, with their odoriferous garlands. Finally, the pair live united, and in death are not separable; in dust they lay side by side, and their souls are united beyond the limits of the tomb.' TIE CHRISTIAN WIFE .- Cheateaubriand

The TURKISH SLAVE TRADE,—This fraffic is carried on only among the Weat-ern tribes of the Caucasus mountains, and the fair Circassian maidens look forward with delight to the hour when they shall be sold by their parents to the Turkish traders, and for the desired end brave the misories. of the Black See passage with pleasure. The Russians objected to this slave trade, insamuch as it afforded supplies of gun-powder and other important articles to their enemies, the warlike Circassians; and when at the time of the Adrianople trenty, they obtained the Western Caucasus, they estab-lished a line of forts along the shore to prevent the trade. A few years since how, ever Russia withdrew, in effect her prohi-bition of the slave trade, by declaring that though the Turkish vessels might come to Annapa and buy as many young Circassians at they pleased, the slaves must all be en-tored as Russian subjects travelling to Tre-bizonde or Constantinople, and provided which Russian passports. By this shrewing when you he slaves have a right to claim the protection of the Ruisian Ambassadors and Cansuls in Turkey, will be led to regard Russia as there natural protector. How TO RECEIVE YOUR PASTOR. ---When your minister calls to make you a friendly visit, receive him without ceremony. His time is precious, and he cannot well afford to wait for you to change your dress, per-form your toilet, and put things to rights. He calls to see you, not your clothes. And de not weary him with your clothes. He would much prefer to hear you speak of your moral concernments. And if you in-vite him to sit at your table, give him pre-cisely such food as your family would have if he had not visited you. Improve your time while he is with you, in conversation upon such subjects as tend to increase your knowledge and your happi-ness. Preachers are men, and they know that people have their affairs to see to; and if your minister is a man of common sense, and finds that you put yourself out on his account, he will not soon come again, lest by so doing he should put you to some in-convenience. Be kind enough to see him just as you are when he calls-he will like you the better for it. FEELINGS PROFER ON MY BIRTHDAY.--

FEELINGS PROPER ON MY BIRTHDAY.— "How slight was the prospect," says Hannah More, "this day twelve months ago, that I should live to see the return of this day! I would enumerate some of the mercies of the past year:—Raised up from a long and dangerous sickness—restored to a serene and a resigned frame of mind— able to thank God, not only for improved health and spirits, and for the many allevi-ations of my long and heavy trial, but for the trial itself. It has shown me more of the world, more of its carruptions, more of my own heart, more of the instability of dan-man opinion, whilet it has weamed me from many attachments which were too strong to be right. He has given me a delightful habi-tation, and continued to me many friends." FERMOR EXHIBITION FOR THE WORLD

Smr Tunnz.—As the demand for ships has increased and the most accessible timber lands have been exhausted, ship-timber has become exceedingly valuable, and an important question arises as to whence future supplies are to be derived, and what effect the growing scarcity of timber will have upon the interests of com-merce. Already ship builders are sometimes greatly embarrassed for lack of suitable timber; and in a few years, except from the distant interior, the supply must entirely fail. Specu-lators and foreign agents are scattered through the country, in all directions, from the British Provinces to the Florida Capes, supplying not only the demand for domestic consumption, but sending of enormous quantities of timber to England, France, and other portions of the European continent. The rapid extension of railroads has opened vast sections of timber and, affording temporary relief, but New York and New Jersey, which were formerly the great timber States. State, but it is too straight for ordinary pur-poses. The New York market is chiefly supplied with occasional arrivals from Ohio. Live oak framing timber comes from South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Louisiana. One of our largest builders says that eventually some other means of strengthening ships must be adopted than those now employed. The rich forests of the South and West present rich fields for indi-vidual enterprise, where large purchases are being made : and though they may now be quite inaccessible, are only reserved for a time, till they shall be penetrated by railroads, and become mines of wealth to their possessors.— N.
