Special Evening Telegram. LONDON, Aug. 10.

The neighbourhood of the docks is practically under mob rule to-day, with the result that such dwindling food supplies are coming in that the metropolis is experiencing something akin to what might happen if a hostile foreign force should succeed in interrupting Britain's trade routes.

Unless good progress is made to day in negotiations looking for the settlement of the strike with the dock workers, the calling out of the troops seems inevitable. The police are seriously outnumbered, and are unable to deal with an emergency. The only quarter where relief was experienced was Billingsgate, where the striking fish porters obtained all they asked, and returned to work. On the other hand, hundreds of railroad car men quit work this morning, and several stations are practically in state of seige. The strikers have all places picket ed, and are preventing by force, all attempts to handle goods. The only traffic allowed to pass without fear of interference is the vans carrying hospital stores. The troops at Aldershot are held under arms, ready to be called at any

The resolution to pay the members of the Commons $2,000 annually, was carried to-day by a vote of 256 to 159. The resolution was moved by Chancel lor Lloyd George, who said that Britain was the only country in the world that did not pay members for work in parliament, which nowadays was becoming so strenuous that members had little time to attend to anything

The Unionists opposed the Bill the ground that payment of member would be a violation of the principle of gratuitous public service; also, that would be improper for members to vote themselves salaries. In the of ficial Unionist amendment against th payment of salaries, it was argued in ffect that Lloyd George's Bill would nean the keeping of the best types of oliticians out of parliament, and fill with professional politicians. McDonald, Labor Leader, said he clieved the measure would cause corruption, and would tend to help gladness.

Uncle Walt THE POET PHILOSOPHER.

The other day a friend fell dead, all unpremeditated; the undertaker to him sped, and shortly had him crated. And just a day or two before I stood with him and wrangled; we argued politics and swore, and got our theories tangled. I said the rudest kind of things DEPARTED -I never can forget it; and now that he's equipped with wings, how deeply I regret it. For we were friends for many years, our friendship was un-broken; he left, and ringing in his ears were harsh words I had spoken. At night I seem to hear his tread, when starlight gleams and dances; he comes and stands beside my bed, and heaves reproachful glances. He breathes a streak of fire and smoke, till I am scared, already, and says: "My friend, until you croak, remorse will be your steady. We stood beside the public dump, and talked of things forgotten; you called me leatherhead and chump, and said my brains were rotten. And while I sit upon a cloud with folks of princely titles, you'll mingle with the worldly crowd, and grief will rend your vitals.' The hearts of myriads of men are sad and almost broken, because they can't call back again the unkind words they've spoken. The foolish words in danger hurled may tinge your life with sadness: but kind words never Copyright, 1911, by George Matthew Adams Wash Mason in this world brought anything but
