The Street Seller of Nuts Was a Spy!

The thoroughness of German espionage is strikingly illustrated by the story of a spy told by Miss Phyllis Campbell in her book, "Back of the Front," published by George Newnes, Ltd., at a shilling—a volume which teems with some of the most vivid pen-pictures yet presented of the horrors of this great conflict.

She relates how, in the early days of the war, while waiting at a Paris railway station for a newspaper, they saw a very familiar figure standing by the pavement—a man with a tray of nuts suspended round his neck.

"He was a tall, soldierly figure of a man—distinguished in appearance but shabby and soiled to a degree. Gossip said he was an English officer who had been ruined by a famous Paris actress. For seven years he had stood between the chateau and the church selling nuts—never looking one in the face, never speaking.

"As we watched him, suddenly from among the soldiers came a typical Paris gamin—ragged, hatless, impudent, and barefooted—evidently drunk. He rested on the edge of the pavement and cannoned against the seller of nuts, whose wares were flung broadcast by the contact. Instead of apologizing he thrust a hand through his hair and said something in argot—and there was a roar from the soldiers.

The seller of nuts looked wizened with rage—and his retort, when it came, was biting and satirical. The gamin wheeled round and spat in his face—and like a flash, the seller of nuts became a soldier—an officer—a gentleman—a spy! The soldiers closed round him—that volley of horrible cursings was in pure high German. The gamin was a famous French detective and the seller of nuts a Prussian nobleman, an officer of high rank."

Prize Day at Central Schools

The annual distribution of prizes to the pupils of the Central Schools took place at the Synod Hall yesterday. Mr. W. W. Blackall presided, and in his opening address complimented the pupils and paid a high tribute to their teachers. Rev. J. Brinton and Rev. Canon Bolt also spoke at some length.

An enjoyable programme of songs, recitations and drills was given and was thoroughly enjoyed. The showing made by the pupils yesterday reflects much credit on Miss Purchase, the acting Principal, and the other teachers, Misses Torrville, Pike and Coulton. The following is a list of the prize winners:—

Kindergarten—Florence Hayward, Lizzie Carter, Jean Benson, Willie Stevenson, Monroe Bugden, Effie Calk.

Florrie Tavernor, Olive Hall.
Room III.—Willie Benson, Sadie Garland, Annie Campbell, Maud Hewitt, Max Carter.
