THE LONDON AIR RAID.
LONDON, July 7.
The raid occurred at about 9.30 this morning. The people crowded the streets, many of them women and children. The police and soldiers had difficulty in holding back the people. Many persons were seen at the windows. Anti-aircraft guns throughout the city and British airplanes immediately engaged the hostile craft and for a time the sound of exploding bombs and the vicious reply of guns was deafening. Straight over the city flew the squadron of raiders pursued by shining shrapnel. The sun was overcast with a haze, such as is so favorable to the raiders. Notwithstanding the haze, however, the Germans were visible plainly to the people in the streets. The raiders appeared most suddenly and persons did not realize that a raid was in progress until the sound of bombs began to be heard. The Germans were travelling at tremendous speed. They appeared to be at a lower altitude than in the last raid when they exacted such a heavy toll of life in London. The following official report of the raid was given out: Lord French reports that at about 9.30 o'clock this morning hostile aircraft in considerable numbers probably in two parties appeared over the Isle of Thanet and the west coast of Essex. After dropping some bombs in Thanet the raiders proceeded in the direction of London, moving roughly parallel to the north bank of the Thames. They approached London from the northeast, then changing their course they proceeded north and west and crossed London from the northwest to the southeast. Bombs were dropped in various places in the metropolitan area. The number of raiding airplanes is at present uncertain, but probably about 20. They were attacked by artillery and by large numbers of our own airplanes, but reports as to the results of the engagements and as to the damage and casualties have not yet been received.

Damage was done in the heart of London by the raid which was one of the greatest, if not the greatest, ever attempted by the Germans over the metropolis. The German raiders came from the north, and left by way of the south. The streets were littered with glass from broken windows. People in the capital are urging that quick reprisals be taken. The west end and fashionable northwestern residential suburbs had a superb view of the approach of the visitors. From the further northern fringes of the metropolis the raiders swept on in fairly close formation, more than a score in number. The squadron, which had been flying high, then began a swift toboggan downwards, their speed increasing tremendously under the assistance of gravity, the planes soon reaching a level evidently of less than 1,000 yards in their swoop toward the central objectives. Meanwhile from all directions anti-aircraft batteries were working like machine guns, bursting shrapnel dotted the air around the oncoming raiders with snarling, vicious, black puffs of smoke more numerous than the planes, and it seemed impossible for the raiders completely to escape from the atmosphere of the curtain of fire surrounding them. The raiders, however, pursued their course, holding their cargo of bombs until they had crossed the suburban district and outlying parts. Thirty-seven persons were killed in the raid and 141 injured, it was officially announced this afternoon. One enemy machine was brought down by the Royal Flying Corps. A most exciting running fight between the British and German airplanes was witnessed by the people of London. After dropping their shower of bombs the Germans made off in a southerly direction. By this time the British aviators had reached a height at which they could engage the raiders and the chase began, machine guns coming into action. Even in basements the effect of the bombs was felt, the ground trembling as though an earthquake was in progress. Windows were shaken from their frames, plaster from the walls, and soot from the chimneys. Evidently there was a considerable difference in the calibre of the bombs dropped. Some had but a slight effect, throwing up clouds of shrapnel like debris. Others evidently were filled with most powerful explosives. The attack was even braver than the previous London raid, the new technique of the Germans being to swoop down to a low altitude, drop their cargo of bombs quickly, and rush homewards. The official report in regard to the casualties follows: Lord French reports that the total casualties reported by the police up to the present follow: Killed, metropolitan area, men 27, women 4, children 3, total 34; Isle of Thanet, men 1, women 2, total 3; total killed 37. Injured, metropolitan area, men 74, women 29, children 36, total 139; Isle of Thanet, women 2, children 1, total 3; total injured 142. One machine was downed by the Royal Flying Corps and fell into the sea at the mouth of the Thames. Many Londoners seeking shelter from the raiders were given refuge in the basement of the American Consulate. No bombs, however, were dropped in that section of the city. Nevertheless the whole raid was observable from this point. Among those who watched its progress were former Premier Asquith and wife, whose home is nearby, and Ralph P. Skinner, American Consul-General. The women secretaries of the consulate, most of whom belong to Red Cross Societies, immediately donned their uniforms and proceeded to report themselves for duty in other sections. The Admiralty statement says: British airmen at Dunkirk watching for the returning raiders, missed them, but brought down seven other enemy machines.

PETROGRAD, July 7.
The war office communication to-day says: In the region of the town of Pinsk our naval flotilla destroyed the mines in the bank of the river Pina. In the direction of Ziochoff region at Baktovmanul, after artillery preparation, our infantry attacked the strongly fortified positions of the enemy. We occupied three lines of his trenches, but later he succeeded by a series of counter attacks in pressing back our detachments. In the sector of the heights northwest of Predovio, Lavrikovca and Rodov and in the wood west of Konluchy our detachments conducted an offensive and engaged in stubborn battle throughout yesterday. Six fortified positions constantly changed hands, but the enemy bringing up fresh reserves, executed a series of counter attacks more formidable, these being from the direction of the village of Urlov and the wood west of Konluchy. At certain places he succeeded in pressing back our attacking detachments. Toward the evening, however, there remained in our hands the heights northwest of Presovio and the villages of Lavrikovca and Travovca and the heights east of Bodov. We captured seventeen officers and 672 men. PETROGRAD, July 8.
In the direction of Kovel near Colaporska, the enemy released gas clouds, which dispersed before reaching our trenches. In the direction of Ziochoff on Friday night the enemy launched energetic counter attacks on the front at Godovand, west of Konluchy, in an attempt to dislodge our troops from positions captured in the battle on Friday. All these attacks were repulsed. All assaults west of Bychka by troops in dense columns, supported by armoured motor cars, were repulsed. In the battle of June 26th in the region of Konluchy an active part was taken by Belgian motor cars, which went as far as enemy wire entanglements. The driver of one of these cars and two soldiers were killed. East and south-east of Brzezany the enemy carried out an intense artillery fire. Attempts by large reconnoitering parties to attack our advanced positions southwest of the village of Chiblain were repulsed. The situation on the Roumanian and Caucasian fronts is unchanged. In the region of Presovio an enemy aeroplane was brought down.

Despite this and pronounced activity on the enemy's part we bombed his aerodromes during the day causing damage and carried out successful artillery work and photography. Activity was continued by bombing during the night in which the enemy showed more enterprise than he had hitherto done. He dropped 144 bombs on our side of the line. Our bombing machines dropped nearly three times that number on his side. In this fighting during the day and night 8 hostile machines were brought down and six others were driven down out of control. The raid occurred at about 9.30 this morning. The people crowded the streets, many of them women and children. The police and soldiers had difficulty in holding back the people. Many persons were seen at the windows. Anti-aircraft guns throughout the city and British airplanes immediately engaged the hostile craft and for a time the sound of exploding bombs and the vicious reply of guns was deafening. Straight over the city flew the squadron of raiders pursued by shining shrapnel. The sun was overcast with a haze, such as is so favorable to the raiders. Notwithstanding the haze, however, the Germans were visible plainly to the people in the streets. The raiders appeared most

Damage was done in the heart of London by the raid which was one of the greatest, if not the greatest, ever attempted by the Germans over the metropolis. The German raiders came from the north, and left by way of the south. The streets were littered with glass from broken windows. People in the capital are urging that quick reprisals be taken. The west end and fashionable northwestern residential suburbs had a superb view of the approach of the visitors. From the further northern fringes of the metropolis the raiders swept on in fairly close formation, more than a score in number. The squadron, which had been flying high, then began a swift toboggan downwards, their speed increasing tremendously under the assistance of gravity, the planes soon reaching a level evidently of less than 1,000 yards in their swoop toward the central objectives. Meanwhile from all directions anti-aircraft batteries were working like machine guns, bursting shrapnel dotted the air around the oncoming raiders with snarling, vicious, black puffs of smoke more numerous than the planes, and it seemed impossible for the raiders completely to escape from the atmosphere of the curtain of fire surrounding them. The raiders, however, pursued their course, holding their cargo of bombs until they had crossed the suburban district and outlying parts. Thirty-seven persons were killed in the raid and 141 injured, it was officially announced this afternoon. One enemy machine was brought down by the Royal Flying Corps. A most exciting running fight between the British and German airplanes was witnessed by the people of London. After dropping their shower of bombs the Germans made off in a southerly direction. By this time the British aviators had reached a height at which they could engage the raiders and the chase began, machine guns coming into action. Even in basements the effect of the bombs was felt, the ground trembling as though an earthquake was in progress. Windows were shaken from their frames, plaster from the walls, and soot from the chimneys. Evidently there was a considerable difference in the calibre of the bombs dropped. Some had but a slight effect, throwing up clouds of shrapnel like debris. Others evidently were filled with most powerful explosives. The attack was even braver than the previous London raid, the new technique of the Germans being to swoop down to a low altitude, drop their cargo of bombs quickly, and rush homewards.
